NAZIS SUFFER BIG LOSSES AT LIEGE

Germans Unable To Dent Belgian Lines Anywhere

Premier Pierlot Charges Germans Without Pity Are Machine-Gunning Civilian Refugee Trains

By LUCCA RIZZARDI

British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

BRUSSELS, May 14.—Germans fighting in the Liege area were suffering heavy losses today, Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot said in a radio report on the military situation. Pierlot, who spoke for only three minutes, said that "the situation around Liege remains unchanged."

"The Liege fortresses continue to spit fire and the Germans are suffering heavy losses," he said.

"Yesterday the Germans launched a number of terrific attacks at different places but our troops resisted admirably and were able to keep their positions. Later a change was made in the defense lines in order to strengthen our defenses.

"This morning the Germans launched attacks at various points but were unable to dent our lines anywhere. Belgian troops resisted bravely, keeping our lines in perfect order.

"Despite rumors not a single parachutist was able to land in Brussels yesterday or during the night."

The Premier said that "the Germans without pity are machine gunning civilian refugee trains, resulting in a large number of victims.

"German brutality repeats that of 1914 and even exceeds it," Pierlot said. "The world will be the judge of the Germans. The hour will come when Germany will pay. The government still is in Brussels and does not intend to leave."

Belgium, meanwhile, had called all men of the second reserve to immediate duty with the colors.

Honored Tuesday

HONORARY COL. J. H. WOODS of Calgary, who was honored by the University of Alberta at its 30th convocation Tuesday by receipt of the honorary degree of doctor of laws. Col. Woods delivered the convocation address to one of the largest graduating classes in the university's history.

FREEDOM IS MAN'S IDEAL WOODS SAYS

British People Fighting For Liberty, He Tells Convocation

Liberty flowing into freedom is the noblest ideal of life and the basis of man's dignity of spirit, Honorary Col. J. H. Woods, president of the Calgary Herald and distinguished pioneer Canadian newspaperman, told the 1940 graduating class of the University of Alberta at the annual convocation exercises Tuesday afternoon in McDougall church.

Col. Woods, guest speaker at convocation, analyzed the meaning of freedom and stressed the obligations it entails.

"In the war now going on, just as in the last Great War," he said, "our people are fighting not for freedom but for liberty—the liberty which would be taken from us if we came under the rule of harsh and extraneous forces."

"But when we have won the war and achieved the security of our liberty, we will then have to take on the obligations of freedom," Col. Woods declared.

RESTORE LIBERTY

"We will be forced by conscience to embrace the servitude which freedom will confer, and seek to restore to other peoples the liberty which so far we have maintained, and which through pressure of military might they have lost," he added.

Full text of Col. Woods' address on "Freedom" follows:

"I find myself today in a very pleasant but unique position. I am being greatly honored by the presidents and senate of this university in the conferring of a degree and, even more especially, in

Namur In Flames After Terrific Air Bombardment

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

PARIS, May 14.—The Paris newspaper L'Instransigeant reported from Brussels today that the Belgian city of Namur, south-west of Liege, was in flames after an intensive aerial bombardment. The newspaper said that the Germans had been bombing Liege for the past 12 hours.

EMPIRE WON'T FLINCH UNTIL DUTY IS DONE

Churchill Sends Message To Mackenzie King On Assuming Office

OTTAWA, May 14—Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain said yesterday in a cable to Prime Minister Mackenzie King that "the people of the British Commonwealth unite once more in arms to resist the terrible scourge of barbarism, and will not flinch or weary till duty is done and justice reigns."

The cable was in reply to one sent by Mr. King to Mr. Churchill when he assumed the premiership in succession to Neville Chamberlain, who also replied Monday to another message sent by the Canadian prime minister.

The message from Mr. Churchill said:

"On accepting His Majesty's invitation to fill the office of prime minister, I send you my warmest greetings and thank you so much for your most kind message.

"The responsibility which has fallen to me in this solemn hour is lightened by the fact that it is shared by you and the other prime ministers of the overseas dominions, by our personal friendship, built in the course of many years, is now strengthened by association in a common task.

"The people of the British Commonwealth unite once more in arms to resist the terrible scourge of barbarism, and will not flinch or weary till duty is done and justice reigns."

The message from Mr. Chamberlain said: I am deeply grateful to you for your telegram and for the support and help which you as prime minister of Canada have given me throughout my period of office. I know the same cordial relationship will exist between you and my successor.

BRUSSELS, May 14.—Belgium today called all men of the second reserve to immediate duty with the colors. The call went to all second reserve men between the ages of 18 and 38. The second reserve is composed of men who previously had been temporarily exempted from military service.

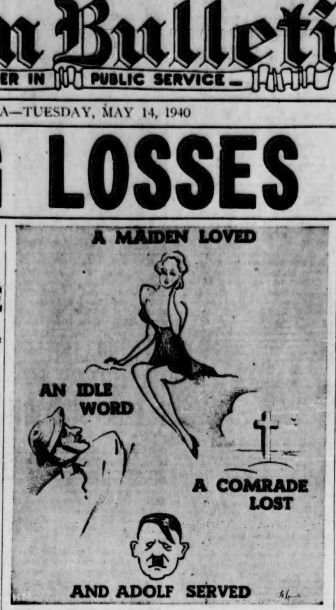

PARIS, May 14.—A French military spokesman said this afternoon the "greatest part" of the Dutch seaport city of Rotterdam is in flames and the situation growing increasingly grave.

BRUSSELS, May 14.—The Belgian high command reported tonight that its forces took up new defence positions last night "without suffering any losses."

PARIS, May 14.—Concentration of male German refugees between the ages of 17 and 45 living in the Paris area has begun today. They will probably be interned in the interior. German women refugees were ordered to report tomorrow.

LONDON, May 14—A Dutch official who has arrived here told of 14 German transport planes landing at the airdrome between The Hague and Rotterdam, believing it to be in German hands. Every man in the planes was captured. The planes presumably also were captured.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 14.—Yugoslavia was reported reliably tonight to have sounded out Greece on what assistance the Greeks might give this country in the event of an Italian attack.

Belgian Officials Preparing To Quit Nation's Capital

Army Of Netherlands Under Tremendous Pressure From Mechanized German Columns In North Areas

By H. C. BURMAN

British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

AMSTERDAM, May 14.—Fires blazing in and near Amsterdam today were set as "military measures" by the Dutch authorities in what was regarded as a move to prevent valuable stores from falling into German hands.

One major conflagration raged in a petroleum warehouse near the Amsterdam central railroad station. It, too, was believed to have been set by the military authorities, since there was no other apparent cause.

Amsterdam suffered a 16-minute air raid alarm this morning, but no German bombs were dropped and there was no fighting in the Amsterdam area.

BRUSSELS, May 14.—The Belgian government prepared today for possible evacuation of this capital at a moment's notice.

Government archives were packed and sent to places where they could not possibly fall into the invaders' hands.

Long lines of Belgians gathered outside the city's banks following proclamation of a moratorium on all payments limiting withdrawals to 5,000 francs every two weeks.

Despite a reassuring radio broadcast by General Henri Denis, Belgian defence minister, the government was expected to quit the capital luring the day.

PARACHUTISTS LYNCHED

A number of German parachuist troops dropped over the Brussels area were captured by civilians and lynched.

A train loaded with 850 German prisoners of war was machine-gunned by Nazi planes today a few minutes after it passed Tournai, in Hainaut province. First reports said 20 of the prisoners were killed.

One of the German parachutists dropped to ground late this morning only a few yards from the offices of the Belgian News Agency in Brussels. He was seized by a crowd and literally torn to pieces when he attempted to open fire.

"I give my word of honor that Brussels is in no way threatened," Defence Minister General Denis told the Belgian people by radio. "All movements are continuing with methodical order and the future must be regarded with confidence."

PREPARE TO FLEE

People were preparing to flee the city at short notice but there was no panic.

The government was determined not to give the Nazis an opportunity to publish any purported "white paper" on alleged Belgian machinations if and when the Germans enter Belgium, they will find absolutely no public document, it was promised.

AMSTERDAM, May 14. — Under tremendous pressure from mechanized German columns in the north, the centre and the south, the army of the Netherlands today carried its fight against Nazi invasion into the fifth day, although its queen and its government had moved to England.

In the north, Nazi troops stood on the eastern shore of the Ijssel Meer (lake), in position at attempt to march across the well-defended 18-mile dam that converted the old Zuider Zee into the new landlocked lake.

In the centre, the enemy admittedly had gained a grip on a small sector of the Grebbe line, the flood-water defences east of the city of Utrecht which run south from Ijssel Meer and are only some 35 miles from Amsterdam. They constitute the chief protection for the official capital, the former seat of the government at The Hague, and the principal seaport, Rotterdam.

12 MILES FROM CITY

In the south, German troops, advancing with Blitzkrieg rapidity, marched west through the province of north Brabant, then struck north across the strategic bridge over the Dilandach Diep, at Moerdijk, and into the vicinity of Dordrecht, only 12 miles south of Rotterdam.

In the southern section of Rotterdam itself, presumably around Waalhaven airport, German detach-

WITH THE FRENCH FORCES IN BELGIUM, May 14—French officers who took part in yesterday's tank battle between St. Trond and Tirlemont described today how French tanks arrived at express speed in time to halt a German column striking into the heart of Belgium.

One of the German "Panzerdivisionen" which cut the Polish army to pieces was sighted speeding westward along the Belgian national highway which leads on past Tirlemont to Louvain and Brussels. At its head travelled a squadron of motorcycle scouts, followed by motorcycles with side-cars, each mounting a machine gun.

The motorcycles were assigned to the role played in the last war by crack cavalry units of Uhlans which executed the invaded countryside ahead of advancing German infantry.

MOUNTING GUNS

Next came a section of armored cars, each mounting machine guns, light artillery and carrying two-way wireless. Behind the armored cars were the officers of the Panzerdivisionen in automobiles.

The main body of the column was made up of hundreds of light, medium and heavyweight tanks followed by batteries of light anti-tank artillery and one battery of heavy calibre field guns.

The objective of the German division, the French knew, was to cut communications between hard-pressed Liege and Allied troops coming up to reinforce the Belgian defenders. The region in which the German column was sighted was ideal for a tank battle. It was made up of rolling plains with few natural obstacles, criss-crossed by a network of roads. The little anti-tank guns which are the Nemesis of tanks were at a disadvantage, because they need some sort of cover behind which to take shelter from the charging monsters.

Abruptly the motorcyclists at the head of the German column wheeled about and sped back toward the invader's main body. A wireless-equipped car flashed the word from one end of the column to the other. The German tanks had sighted the French ahead of them.

DEPLOY IN FIELDS

The German tanks hastily clawed their way off the road and deployed in the fields on either side. In tank warfare it is important to break columns to avoid enfilading fire. For the first great tank battle in history the Germans took positions similar to those worshiped out for horsemen in centuries of cavalry warfare.

Each tank found its place in a formation that had been studi-

Convocation Sees Degrees Awarded To 453 Graduates

One Of Largest University Classes Presented In Colorful Ceremony At McDougall Church Auditorium

Amid dignified, impressive, colorful ceremonies, degrees were awarded 453 students at the thirtieth convocation of the University of Alberta held Tuesday at McDougall auditorium. The graduating class was one of the largest in the history of the institution, being only 20 less than the all-time peak of 1939.

The ceremonies took place in the presence of a congregation that filled the large auditorium to the limit of its capacity. Many were unable to gain admission.

In addition to the graduating class, there were assembled members of the university faculty and a large number of civic, provincial and other dignitaries. Relatives and friends of the graduating class, many of whom had come from long distances were also present.

COLORFUL CEREMONY

Few ceremonies in the history of the university have been as colorful or impressive as this, the solemnity of the occasion being intensified by reason of the war in which the British Empire is engaged. In the World War of 1914-18 University of Alberta men played a splendid part and many stand ready to go forward in the present conflict.

Familiar figure missing from the convocation exercises was Dr. A. C. Rutherford, chancellor of the U. of A. since 1926 and first premier of Alberta, the province whose administration the institution was established. Illness has necessitated his remaining at home for some time.

Honorary doctor of laws degrees were awarded Honorary Col. J. H. Woods of Calgary and C. A. Magrath of Leithbridge at this convocation. Col. Woods delivered the convocation address, which came following his receipt of the honorary degree.

The event came as the conclusion to the academic year at the University of Alberta, a year, as pointed out in the presidential address, in which the institution progressed and continued to accomplish much.

For the 543 members of the graduating class it marked the occasion

RESISTANCE OF DUTCH BROKEN, RADIO RUMOR

Broadcast Heard Purported To Be Coming From Netherlands

LONDON, May 14—A broadcast heard in London tonight said by the announcer to be coming from the Netherlands radio quoted the Dutch army commander, General Henri Gerard Winkelman, as declaring "our resistance has been broken by overwhelming power."

The Associated Press has no direct report on this from Amsterdam, however, and identity of the broadcast was hazy.

The Holland broadcasting station is at Hilversum, some 18 miles southeast of Amsterdam and just east of the main water line to which the Dutch have retreated.

Thus it is possible that the radio is now controlled by the German army, and the broadcast is being made by the Nazis.

Before the intercepted broadcast, Queen Wilhelmina, now in exile in London, had urged her subjects not to give up hope and General Winkelman had issued a communique which said the northern part of Rotterdam was firmly in Dutch hands and that a German attempt to force the IJsselmeer Dike had failed so far.

Greatest Fight Of Time Begins On West Front

German Troops Come Up Behind Motorized Columns—Allies Solidify Line Picked To Block Offensive

PARIS, May 14.—The French government today recalled to the colors all soldiers given leaves from the army to do essential agriculture work. The men will all rejoin their units by Thursday or Friday, the war ministry announced.

By AXEL DE HOLSTEIN
Havas Staff Writer

PARIS, May 14.—The greatest battle of all time was joined today in southern Belgium and along the Franco-Belgian and Franco-Luxembourg borders.

Along the Meuse river for 70 miles from Liege to Namur and from Namur to Sedan, just across the frontier, great masses of Nazi troops have come up behind the fast forward-thrusting motorized columns which cut their way down from Liege during the past 36 hours.

Across Luxembourg and through the Ardennes forest the German army has come up to meet the main Allied forces assembling along the line deliberately selected to stop the German offensive.

Today from Liege to Sedan and from Sedan eastward in the Franco-Luxembourg border region north of the Maginot line through Montmedy and Longwy to the Moselle, a distance of more than 120 miles, the first great battle of the second Great War has begun.

FIGHTING IN PROGRESS

The official army communique today said the Germans, driving past Liege, had moved southeastward 32 miles to Namur and 40 miles farther on to the vicinity of Sedan. Behind them have come the main German forces. Late dispatches from the front said fighting was in progress in the towns of Longwy and Sedan.

The Liege forts are still holding, the communique said, and form a salient deep in the centre of the invading German forces. The column moving west from Liege suffered a terrific blow from the onslaught of French tanks in the slash of the steel monsters near Tongres yesterday. Today the French victory in that first great battle of tanks was clearly established. The German losses were enormous.

In the north of Holland the Dutch army appeared to be in a grave situation. The Dutch line of resistance was forced close to Arnhem and the Nazis drove forward on both sides of the Rhine toward Rotterdam, whose fall appears to be imminent. The Dutch are still fighting fiercely, however, in the peninsular like square formed by the provinces of old Holland and marked off by the cities of Utrecht, Amsterdam and The Hague.

GIGANTIC AIR BATTLE

Over the entire front a gigantic air battle raged. The French communique said that late yesterday 16 additional enemy planes had

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCES IN FRANCE, May 14—Confidence in final victory was proclaimed by Viscount Gort, commander in chief of the British Expeditionary Forces, in a message to his troops. He said: "We are now on the eve of one of the greatest moments in the history of our Empire."

Gort's message, addressed to all ranks, said:

"I send my congratulations to all commanders, their staffs and their troops on the admirable manner in which the forward move has been carried out with the invaluable aid of our gallant comrades of the Royal Air Force. We are now on the eve of one of the great moments in the history of our Empire. The struggle will be hard and long but we can be confident of final victory."

POSITION OF SOUTH DUTCH UNITS SERIOUS

Great Battle Is Developing In Area East Of Brussels

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, May 14—The military position in the south of Holland is "undoubtedly serious," it was announced here today while the German and Allied forces in Belgium were jockeying for position for a big battle east of Brussels.

Liege has not fallen into German hands although it is likely that one of its northern forts, Eben Emael, may have been captured.

Liege may be isolated and cut off, but "we believe there is fighting going on in the citadel and that there is no reason to believe that Liege has fallen or need fall in the near future," a military spokesman said.

NO CONFIRMATION

There is no confirmation here of a German attack on the Maginot line though the position around Sedan is obscure.

Warning strongly against over-optimism about the campaign, this source said that in Belgium British troops now are co-operating with the Belgians in covering Brussels.

He added that a great battle is developing in that area east of Brussels.

"It will be a few days yet," this source said, "before we can estimate the position" in this phase of the war.

The German attack was described as bearing to the west rather than to the south, and observers here expressed the view that the smash at Sedan — which the Germans reached today—is part of the drive against Belgium, rather than the beginning of a blow against the Maginot line.

JACK-OF-ALL-TRADES

British authorities disclosed for the first time last night that the Empire had unleashed against Germany's "total war" the Bristol Beaufort, a "jack-of-all-trades" aircraft capable of bombing, fighting and reconnaissance work. The machine is armed with four guns forward and a power operated "turret" amidships, allowing it to fire broadside, something no other

ROME STUDENT GROUP MOCKS ALLIED FLAGS

New Outbursts Made In Front Of British, French Embassies

ROME, May 14—Students burned British and French flags on a simulated coffin before the British embassy today in a new outburst of anti-Allied demonstrations.

Earlier they had demonstrated at the French embassy and then marched across town to Porta Pia, a gate in the Roman wall adjacent to the embassy.

Troops stood guard before a huge throng in front of the French embassy after about 5,000 others had massed under Premier Mussolini's balcony and clamored for a speech.

Several thousand schoolboys, ranging in age from 12 up, carried the coffin wrapped in the French flag with an umbrella on top, a caricature of France labelled "Poor Chamberlain's Fisher-Women" and another of Britain with the title "Her Boy Friend."

CARRIED SWASTIKA

Besides Italian flags, the students had one big Swastika banner and another with the legend "down with the French republic."

Several thousand students were halted by a barrier of troops at the British embassy, as they had been before at the French embassy. Massing a short distance away, however, they set fire to the "coffin" and threw their clubs on it to make a bonfire.

Before they disbanded, a Fascist official in blackshirt uniform congratulated them on a "magnificent demonstration," and told them their cry was "a war cry."

He declared France and Britain must understand that Italy would never remain a prisoner in the Mediterranean.

Premier Mussolini drove by the bonfire on his way home to lunch and was cheered.

In Milan, approximately 5,000 students paraded for more than an hour, cheering Mussolini and Hitler. The demonstrators attempted to reach the French and British consulates, but were turned back by infantry detachments.

MAINTAINS SILENCE

Cheers and shouts for a speech brought Mussolini to the balcony. Smilingly he acknowledged the demonstrators' greeting but he maintained the silence which, he said last week, "only facts" could break.

The British were expected to protest to Italian authorities over the slapping of a Briton identified as the Earl of Hardwicke at a fashionable night club last night by an Italian distributing anti-British leaflets. The incident was said to have occurred when the earl, a personal friend of Bruno Mussolini, refused to read a leaflet laid on his table by the Italian.

STREET INCIDENTS

Everywhere stories were circulated of street incidents and molestations of British people and their Italian sympathizers.

Various explanations were offered by diplomats to explain these outbursts coming at this time.

Some thought it might be an effort to divert British and French attention to the Mediterranean while Germany smashed into Holland and Belgium. Another suggestion was that it might be a clever effort to whip up Italian feeling by shifting stress from the pro-German to the anti-British angle.

The pro-German feeling desired by some leaders has been slow to catch on among the people.

That the government wanted the demonstration at this time was likely, since it was widespread publication of Luca Pietromarchi's report to Mussolini on the Allied contraband control and its effect on Italian shipping which touched them off.

TRADE AGREEMENT

It was announced today that Italy is to obtain considerable quantities of Spanish raw materials in exchange for Italian-finished products under a trade agreement signed at Madrid May 8.

Italy will receive not only raw materials, presumably minerals, for her industries, but also will get foodstuffs. Trade is to be regulated by reciprocal import quotas, with payment through a clearing system.

HEADQUARTERS INTERNATIONAL BANK IS MOVED

BASEL, Switzerland, May 14—The Bank for International Settlements, which has retained its headquarters here since September, is removing all its records and its business office to the little village of Chateau d'Oex in the Bernese Alps, it was learned last night.

Many other large banking and business firms in Basel and Zurich moved into the interior during the last three days due to large German troop concentrations across the border.

The Swiss army meanwhile stood fully mobilized as the reported German troop concentrations on the frontier strengthened the belief of foreign observers that Germany might strike through Switzerland toward the Rhone valley of France.

Such a thrust, these observers suggested, might be made to draw Italy into the war on Germany's side.

So strongly was gas opposed to on its first introduction to England that armed guards were necessary at the places where it was made.

been brought down, making the day's total verified at 31. Today huge squadrons were engaged on both sides over the front and over the interior of the low countries.

While the northern and eastern sections of the front thus blazed into action, the Alsace and Lorraine sectors of the Maginot line had a comparatively quiet day. The Germans launched two fair-sized attacks on the plateau east of Forbach and several local actions occurred est of Wissembourg, in the Lauter river section.

Allied air forces carried out reconnaissance flights deep behind the zone of battle and also successfully attacked convoys and German communications between the Rhine and the Dutch and Belgian frontiers, causing heavy damage and losses among the German troops moving from the right to the left bank of the Rhine.

The German troops began reaching various points along the Meuse late yesterday morning. The Allied command expected that by today sufficient forces would have been brought up by the foe to attempt a crossing.

This is the act that would bring the main battle forces of Germany and the Allies into a frontal collision.

GERMAN FORCES

The German southern wing, advancing from the Moselle through Luxembourg and the Ardennes to the Meuse, appeared to constitute the stronger of the Nazi armies converging on the battlef. :nt. It includes large infantry forces and at least two tank divisions which were sent out in advance as soon as the force crossed the Moselle. The tank columns are being followed by infantry, heavy artillery on tractors, and accompanying auxiliary units.

The advance through the Ardennes was made amid great difficulties caused by the efficient job of destruction and obstruction carried out by French and Belgium retarding units which fell back in the path of the advancing Nazis. As soon as the Germans reached the Belgian border they spread out fanwise to approach the Meuse and join the other columns moving down from Liege.

Along the eastern sector, from Sedan to the Moselle, fighting has begun in the zone in front of the Maginot line proper. Naturally the precise location of the Maginot line remains a secret but it can be stated definitely that the towns of Sedan and Longwy, where fighting was in progress today, are north of the French fortifications. The Germans are using large tank forces, artillery and airplanes to attack the French positions.

The official communique said:

INCREASED VIOLENCE

"The German attack is developing with increased violence. There was nothing important to report in central Belgium. The enemy reached the Meuse from Liege to Namur and Sedan. This last city was evacuated and particularly fierce fighting took place in its immediate environs as well as in the region north of Dinant. The battle continues from south of Longwy to the Moselle. Enemy attacks were repulsed in the vicinity of Wissembourg.

"Our troops and Allied troops are fighting valiantly against the enemy, who is making extremely intense efforts, particularly with tanks and aviation. At the end of the day of May 13, 16 enemy planes were shot down. They must be added to the total given for the evening communique of May 13 (15). During the night our air force carried out many reconnaissance flights."

Military observers sized up the trend of the fighting to indicate that the Allies would make their stand in "the great battle of the west, on a line along the Meuse river from Givet, France, north to Namur, Belgium, thence further north to Louvain.

MERE PRELIMINARIES

"Mere preliminaries," is the way a French war ministry spokesman described continual air battles, infantry drives and the gigantic mechanized engagements in which the French assertedly dispersed between 1,500 and 2,000 German tanks in the Belgian Ardennes mountains, north of France, where the Nazis sought to cut Allied communications.

The "real" struggle for possession of the Netherlands and Belgium, he said, will come on the new Allied line.

Military commentators said the Ardennes fight yesterday was the first in history in which two such fleets of "land battleships" had matched tactics and guns.

Sketchy dispatches told how the tank battle was fought in bright sunlight on a flat terrain between Tirelmont, and Tongres, where the machines were able to manoeuvre freely.

RUSH INTO BATTLE

The French corps, en route to the battle line after the invasion Friday, rushed into engagement at full speed, it was said.

The dust raised by the encounter could be seen from afar. The roar of the tanks' guns could be heard for miles.

A French staff officer said a battle between "the full weight of the Allied mechanized army and the full weight of German armored divisions may come now within a few days."

Advices from the front said the German offensive appeared to be general north of the Moselle. Observers cited three objectives which the German general staff might have immediately in mind:

1. To divide the liaisoned fronts of The Netherlands and Belgium in a drive to the coast.
2. To win the left bank of the Meuse river and drive on Brussels.
3. To force the French defences along the Luxembourg border where the German army corps got a running start through the defenseless Grand Duchy.

It was emphasized by a spokesman of the French war ministry that slow withdrawals by British, French, Dutch and Belgium troops could not be considered a retreat because that action merely was the following out of a pre-arranged plan of strategy.

An inter-Allied censorship was established by the joint British-French-Belgium command in Belgium.

TORY CHIEF'S RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED

Caucus Of Conservatives Names Hon. R. B. Hanson Temporary Leader

OTTAWA, May 14.—Conservative members of the House of Commons, having accepted Hon. R. J. Manion's resignation as party chief after electing Hon. R. B. Hanson temporary house leader, adjourned their caucus today until next Friday morning. The group met only briefly this morning to deal with organization details.

OTTAWA, May 14.—A special caucus of Conservative members of the House of Commons last night accepted "with deep regret" the resignation of Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion as national leader.

Earlier yesterday the caucus, from a field of five candidates, chose Hon. R. B. Hanson, member for York-Sunbury, as temporary house leader for the parliamentary session which opens Thursday.

Dr. Manion, who was defeated in Fort William in the Dominion elections last March 26, tendered his resignation in a statement given the caucus when it opened Monday morning.

TALKS TO COMMITTEE

The leader then left the caucus chamber and took no further part in proceedings. After the dinner recess Monday evening, a committee headed by Mr. Hanson conferred with Dr. Manion in his centre block office, close by the caucus chamber.

Discussions in caucus were resumed at 5 p.m. M.S.T. and Dr. Manion went to his Ottawa home. At about 7:15 p.m. John R. MacNicol, Toronto-Davenport, caucus chairman, handed a statement to newspapermen announced acceptance of Dr. Manion's resignation.

Mr. MacNicol said he had telephoned the caucus decision to Dr. Manion's home.

Following is the official statement:

"By a motion duly seconded it was resolved that caucus accede to the personal wishes of Hon. R. J. Manion as expressed in his letter to caucus and that his resignation as leader of the Conservative party be accepted with deep regret."

PERSONAL DESIRE

In his prepared statement for the caucus Monday morning, Dr. Manion said it was his personal wish to retire from leadership but he offered to seek a seat in parliament and continue as leader if the caucus believed that course to be in the best interests of the party.

It was the second time within two years that the historic Conservative party has found itself without a national leader.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, after 11 years as party chieftain, including five years as prime minister, resigned because of ill-health. He was succeeded by Dr. Manion at the national convention which was held in July, 1938.

The caucus will continue today to work on a sessional program and appoint certain committees associated with the organization. The question of a national convention to choose a permanent leader has not yet been discussed, Mr. MacNicol said.

In the last Dominion elections, all Conservative candidates ran as supporters of the national government proposal made by Dr. Manion immediately after parliament was dissolved in January.

ONE INDEPENDENT TORY

Only 39 of Dr. Manion's straight supporters were elected and he was defeated personally. J. S. Roy who ran in Gaspe as an Independent Conservative and was elected, sat in the caucus, and presumably will be grouped with the straight Conservatives.

Death of Dr. A. B. Hyndman, successful National Government candidate in Carleton county, reduced the group to a total of 39 including the Independent-Conservative.

Tells Of Progress

DR. W. A. R. KERR, president of the University of Alberta, who told of the progress the university had made during the past year when he addresed graduands at convocation exercises held in McDougall auditorium Tuesday.

to say "good bye" to their Alma Mater, the institution where for years they had studied, worked and played. And on the faces of many of the class could be seen obvious regret at the arrival of this moment even amid the joy of receipt of a degree in recognition of work accomplished.

By the time the ceremonies commenced the church was crowded. Forming up outside, the academic procession slowly wound round from Macdonald Drive to 100 street and entered the church. In the unavoidable absence of Dr. Rutherford, Dr. W. A. R. Kerr, president of the university, acted in his stead.

The procession was impressive. There were the robes of the many dignitaries taking part. Then, when the faculty and other dignitaries had entered, the remainder of the procession was made up of the graduating class, the young men and women who were the centre of attraction.

MORTAR-BOARDS

For the first time in the history of the U. of A. the graduating class wore "mortar-board" hats, familiar to such classes in most universities. All wore black gowns, while underneath the gowns, the girls wore white graduation dresses.

When the academic procession had completed its course, the congregation stood and sang O Canada.

Then the Invocation was pronounced by Rev. Aubrey Stephen Tuttle.

Next came the submission of the annual report by Dr. Kerr, outlining many features of university life during the academic year.

This was followed by the conferring of honorary degrees.

Next came the convocation address, delivered by Col. Woods.

At the conclusion of his address, announcement was made of the awards of scholarships, prizes and medals and this in turn was followed by the presentation of diplomas.

Conferring of degrees was the next business on the program. This ceremony was divided into three phases, the presentation, the pledge and the admission.

This ceremony completed, the convocation exercises came to an end and God Save the King was sung.

Then came the recession.

The annual convocation tea was then held at Athabasca hall and in the evening the banquet and dance will be held in the hall. This will wind up activities at the university for the year.

Dr. Kerr Tells Of University Advance

Total registration of university students for the current academic year amounted to 2,327, an increase of 132 over the number enrolled for 1938-39, President W. A. R. Kerr said in submitting his annual report Tuesday afternoon at convocation.

President Kerr said this increase was larger than might have been expected on account of the outbreak of war last September.

"It will be recalled," he continued, "that the rush to enlist in 1914 heavily reduced our then relatively small student registration of 439. This time the military authorities were wisely more concerned that students should either finish their courses or else prepare themselves for specialized services with the armed forces."

MANY IN UNIFORMS

"A considerable number of undergraduates are already in uniform, though the university has backed the military authorities in discouraging students whose professional training was still incomplete from trying to enlist.

"I may add," the president continued, "that a special committee of the general faculty, headed by Major D. E. Cameron, university librarian, has been set up to deal with the problems of students who wished to take up arms or who had developed time-table clashes between their military studies and their university work."

President Kerr expressed his profound regret that "our esteemed chancellor," Dr. A. R. Rutherford was unable to attend convocation due to ill-health.

"It was originally through his initiative as premier and minister of education that this university was founded and now, for almost a third of a century subsequently, we have grown up in his nurture and admonition. I am sure all his old friends will join in vows for the chancellor's speedy restoration to health," declared the president.

"Our alumni have lately been reorganized, Many of them have already reached positions of prestige and power in this province and are eager to advance in a practical way the university's interests. From now on, I believe, they will be increasingly heard from.

"In spite of present serious difficulties," said President Kerr, "the high mission of the provincial university remains clear and unchallengeable.

"It is a storehouse of impartial knowledge: it is the scientific arm of the government: it is the latter's medium for the training of the professional classes which increase inevitably as, year by year, our civilization grows more and more complex."

President Kerr referred with "profound sorrow" to the death of Ernest Albert Howes, for a quarter of a century dean of the faculty of agriculture.

"It became his conscious task," said the president, in paying tribute to Dean Howes, "to make the university's gospel of modern scientific agriculture understood and appreciated by our farming community and in this far-sighted effort he was largely successful."

President Kerr also referred to the retirement of Professor Cecil Scott Burgess of the department of architecture and Professor Henri de Savoye since 1920 a member of the department of modern languages. He lauded both of them highly for their services to the university over a long period of years.

STAFF CHANGES

President Kerr listed the many staff changes which had taken place due to members of the staff being called to special war duties, and said it was a source of congratulation to the university to feel that it could be of such service in a time of national crisis.

"In spite of difficult times, it is a pleasure to report that during the past year gifts of money towards research, scholarships and the library have amounted to rather more than $20,000."

The university received from J. S. McLean of Toronto a gift of $1,000 to provide for eight scholarships of $125 to be awarded to promising and needy students from rural areas. It is often the last hundred dollars in cash which is difficult to come by, and the university is doubly grateful to Mr. McLean for his generous action," the president said.

bomber in the second Great War can do.

While refugees from Holland and Belgium streamed into the United Kingdom, King George and Queen Elizabeth set an example of hospitality by turning Buckingham Palace over to the 59-year-old Dutch Queen who had crossed the North Sea in a British warship to escape German attempts to bomb or kidnap her and her family.

Queen Wilhelmina had been preceded earlier in the day by Princess Juliana, her consort, Prince Bernhardt, and their two infant daughters.

The Netherlands minister to London, Dr. Michiels van Verduijen, said the Queen left Holland against her wishes, solely because her advisers convinced her of the importance of avoiding capture by the Germans and the disintegration of her government.

The minister said Germany had commanded that Queen Wilhelmina and her government be taken "at all costs."

STIFFEN RESISTANCE

British troops rushed to stiffen the resistance of the Belgians, who appeared to be falling back from the salient formed by the River Meuse (Maas) and the Albert canal, toward a shorter and more easily defended line.

The admiralty announced that British warships were helping the Dutch and Belgian forces by bombarding plane-landed German troops on the coast.

Until the war spread to Holland and Belgium, the British Spitfires, Hurricans, Wellingtons and Blenheims bore the brunt of the war in the air.

Meanwhile The Times, commenting on the continental situation warned: "Wemust brace ourselves to take many hard blows and, it may be, to receive much bad news before the prospect brightens."

Through The Mill

He hadn't eaten a square meal for so long that his jaw muscles were out of practice, the young fellow who leaned dejectedly on the rail of the prisoners' dock intimated to the cadi Tuesday morning. Through an interpreter the accused "vag" unfolded a sordid story of hunger and suffering that was considerably brightened by his admitted uncanny ability to escape from the bondage of toil for well over a year. Frequent side-door pullman excursions to Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg and Vancouver (The Pacific coast being favored in the winter months) were broken by a sojourn on city relief, the youth stated. Sleeping problem was solved by chatting pleasantly in all-night city cafes during the hours of darkness in order to enjoy the refreshing slumber under sunny skies in the daytime.

"What have you got against work?" His Worship asked.

"I get pains in my head and back every time I try it," was the reply. For the next 30 days the young fellow will "rest" easily at the government institution at Fort Saskatchewan. No worries about sleeps and eats, but perhaps these pains in the head and back will return because the magistrate said the sentence carries a hard labor stipulation.

He told police-officers he owned a quarter section of land that the police claim is registered as belonging to another party. Accused says that is explained because the other party failed to pay him for it. The matter will all be straightened out in supreme criminal court at the next sitting.

FRENCH TANK TROOPS BEAT NAZI FORCES

ously worked out in years of manoeuvres. The initial formation is all important in a tank charge, because in the confusion of battle there is little opportunity to re-form. The German tanks were organised in groups. The orders given to these groups are borrowed from the Jargons of chess and geometry.

Meanwhile the anti-tank guns hastily drew into position, the field guns came up and were unlimbered, and the motorcycle scouts scattered to find cover in ditches and behind walls on either side of the highway.

The German preparations were still incomplete, however, when the leading tanks of the opposing French column thundered down the road. The German anti-tank guns opened point blank fire with armor-piercing shells. As more and more French tanks arrived on the battlefield, they, too, swerved into the fields and charged toward the ranks of the German machines.

SCOUTS ARE CAUGHT

It was a bad few moments for some of the German motorcycle scouts, who were caught near the head of their column and blasted with machine-gun bullets and light shells from the leading French tanks.

The German tanks likewise gathered speed and the opposing ranks charged at each other, breaking down walls, crumpling trees and destroying everything in their path. Cannon and machine-gun fire added to the din.

In many cases the accident of battle placed little two-man whippet tanks in the path of huge, lumbering 50-ton mastodons. Small tanks were crushed like pygmies, their big adversaries lumbering on unhurt.

The tide of battle quickly began to favor the French, who were led by a Parisian general known throughout the military world as a brilliant specialist in mechanized cavalry. The French tanks attacked furiously and even recklessly. Their drivers soon realised that their armor plate was proof against the heaviest artillery the Germans had on hand and the battle settled down to a series of "dogfights," with tank challenging tank.

Reinforcements occasionally arrived from either side and sped to the aid of their hardest pressed comrades. The field was soon dotted with overturned, burnt-out hulks.

LEARN NEW TRICKS

As they fought, the crews began to evolve special tactics for their new kind of warfare—tactics that could be learned only on the battlefield and not in manoeuvres. At a range of a few yards, machine-gunners tried to place bursts through the small enemy peep holes. Although a very heavy tank could in most cases crush a light one, it was found that a medium tank could ram one of the biggest from a certain angle on the flank and crush in its side, or at least rock it on its treads.

Since only advanced forces of both armies were involved, there was no infantry to come on the field and exploit the French victory. The battle slowly died down except for sporadic clashes between far-flung tank patrols and intermittent fire from the few remaining anti-tank guns.

Despite the absence of infantry to follow through, the French commanders were jubilant. The battle was decisive. The German panzer-divisioen was stopped, and the French tanks had proved superior.

German Planes Bomb Hospital Killing Patients

By RALPH HEINZEN

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

WITH THE BRITISH ROYAL AIR FORCE, IN FRANCE, May 14.—German planes bombed a hospital in a French village on the Marne, killing a number of patients, R.A.F. sources asserted today. In addition to the patients 16 other villagers were killed.

The sources said that a number of maternity cases were in the hospital, on which the R.A.F. reported the German bombers released four explosive and four incendiary bombs.

One of the explosive bombs was said to have landed in the hospital garden and destroyed an entire building and damaged others. Three adjoining houses were set afire.

Many of the victims, R.A.F. sources said, were school children. School books were said to have been found scattered in the debris.

Position of youth in present day society has been thrown out of balance by economic insecurity Rev. R. McElroy Thompson of Metropolitan United Church, told the Kiwanis Club Monday at the Macdonald. He said the function of the home also has been changed by the thrust of new conditions.

Best Seamen In Canada's Navy Are Recruits From Prairie Provinces

(Editor's Note. Following is the second of a series of articles upon Canada's West Coast defences, written by the British United Press Correspondent following a press tour arranged by the Department of National Defence.)

By DONALD DODDS
British United Press Staff Correspondent

WITH THE CANADIAN DEFENCE FORCES ON THE WEST COAST, May 14—Canada's best sea fighters for her young navy comes from farms and villages scattered over her broad waterless prairies, born a thousand miles from salt water.

Tradition is being upset here and disproved is the old claim that only the sons of deep-sea men with salt water in their veins make first-rate seadogs.

"Funny thing, our best chaps come from the prairies, and most of them never saw the ocean before they joined up," a lieutenant-commander of the Royal Canadian Navy told me and other Canadian newsmen as we visited H.M.C.S. Naden, land training school of Canada's navy, at Esquimalt, Vancouver Island.

START FROM SCRATCH

"They're awfully clumsy when they come here and a lot of them have never been off the farm," he added, "but they beat the chaps who have been brought up along the coast. A lot of the coast boys are as good as any, but some of them think they know it all because they've been used to being on the water, sailing small boats. The prairie boys don't know a thing about the sea, and they're willing to learn right from the beginning. The whole lot, though, are good boys."

This was our second visit to the Naden since outbreak of war, the first having been after only a few weeks of hostilities. At that time the Canadian Navy was faced with the job of turning clumsy landsmen into fighting seamen.

Looking at the collection of recruits, many of them gawky farm lads, we had felt a bit dubious. Surely, we had thought, these were not the men from whom they drew the real sailors, the ones who actually carried on where Drake and Nelson left off?

Looking at them on our second visit, eight months later, we silently apologized. The faces were the same, the big friendly grins were still there, and the names were the same, but there it ended.

CHANGED INTO SEAMEN

Our collection of stumbling landlubbers had somehow changed to smartly stepping seamen, sharp, alert, Royal Navy all over. They were beginning to know their jobs and they knew it. They walked differently, and most of them wore a look of quiet confidence.

The same boys who less than a year ago were milking cows, chopping wood, threshing wheat, a thousand and more miles from the sea, were now manning cutters, rowing as smartly as ever did the crew of Nelson's barge.

Groups of them were whipping signal flags up and down, talking to one another half a mile away by them, repairing intricate engine room machinery, and stopping to explain to us how it worked. Others were practising gunnery, loading a dummy 4.7 inch gun with a speed and precision that reminded us of a smoothly oiled piece of machinery. Everywhere we saw them going through their tasks, neatly, quietly, efficiently, without any show.

At the Naden, one ship the Nazis will hesitate to claim sunk, being a collection of buildings ashore, we went through a typical day with the youngsters who are being trained to man Canada's fighting ships.

HAVE BUSY DAY

Out of their hammocks—they say goodbye to beds when they don the navy blue—they tumble at six in the morning. After a hot shower they go to the classrooms for an hour of instruction before breakfast, which comes at 7. Breakfast over at 8, an hour spent in "cleaning ship"—apparently nautical for putting things straight. At 9 a five minute rest period comes, and then the time for division, which means assembly on the parade ground where they line up for inspection. Now a raised platform with a brass railing, representing a ship's quarter deck. From it the Naden's commanding officer oversees his men assembled before him.

Out on the quarter deck comes a white surpliced chaplain who says prayers for the ship's company. He's an Anglican chaplain, and before prayers Roman Catholics fall out. One of their own faith is provided for them.

Nobody walks on the parade ground—they run. Physical "jerks" are conducted by an instructor, and they trot off to instruction at 10 o'clock.

Instruction, both theoretical and practical, fill most of the time until noon, when dinner is ready. Dinner over at 1:15, instruction begins again and lasts until 4, when it's tea time. At this time those having all night leave are given their freedom until the next morning. Boys under age aren't allowed to stay out all night, and it's cause for celebration when they arrive at a man's estate and can do so.

Those not having leave go to miscellaneous duties, most of them doing light tasks, or going to organized games, until 6 o'clock. From 6 to 7 is leisure period, when it's time for supper. From 8 to 8:30 another leisure period, and then comes a half hour round of putting things shipshape for the night. Another inspection comes at 9, and from 9:30 to 10:30 is another free period. Lights out comes at 10:30 when hammocks are unlashed and swung up. In they climb, and it's the end of another day.

MISS THEIR HOCKEY

The change from civil life is sudden and strange, but the ones we talked to seemed to like it. Most of them had a grouch against the other man, though. At least, that is those from the prairies and the East.

"I like it pretty well around here, but gosh, I sure miss the hockey," grinned able-seaman Frank Robinson of Saskatoon, as we interrupted him on his sentry beat. "I've been here since November and I'm looking forward to taking a trip back home soon."

Gordon "Casanova" Morris (his delighted colleagues stuck in the "Casanova") of Edmonton was buying cigarettes in the canteen when we spoke to him. "I miss the hockey here, too," he said. "Winter's not so hot here after the prairies, but they treat us well."

A Winnipeg contribution, able-seaman Joseph Gallo, missed his home town.

"I like it here, but gosh, I miss Winnipeg, and how!" he grinned. "I'll be back on leave soon, and I'm looking forward to it. Everything is fine here, but there's no skating."

S. H. Strand, of Calgary, in training at Esquimalt since January, admitted he, too, missed the prairie winter. "I like it here fine, though," he said. "I have a 14-day leave coming up soon and I'm sure looking forward to it."

Regina's Rodney Sylvester, who was learning primary navigation when we spoke to him, admitted he had never seen the ocean before coming to Esquimalt. "I like it here, but I sure miss the hockey. Seems funny to find it all green at this time of the year. I left my wife back there, and I'm going back to see her in June. Sure looking forward to it."

GOING TO MARRY

Another prairie boy, Reg. Sargeant of Winnipeg, joined in the general lament for hockey. He consoled himself, however, by thinking of his girl back in Winnipeg, "who is coming out next month to marry me."

"She's swell," he confided. We thought she probably was, too.

William McNally of Edmonton told of his girl back home, as he paused from running up signal flags. "I'm going back in June, and I'm looking forward to seeing her and my folks," he told us.

Leaving the gates after lights out had been sounded, one of our group spoke up as we passed a sentry who presented arms.

"Pretty swell bunch of kids, aren't they?" he said.

"Yeah, pretty swell," he thought.

ALLIES SPEND $350,000,000 ON U.S. PLANES

$150,000,000 In Planes Are Purchased During Last Two Weeks

WASHINGTON, May 14—An Allied spokesman announced here yesterday that Great Britain and France have bought about $350,000,000 of United States airplanes and airplane motors within the last four weeks.

Renee Pleven, French air expert of the Allied purchasing mission, said that $150,000,000 additional purchases had been made since Arthur Purvis, director of the mission, announced $200,000,000 worth of purchases two weeks ago.

The recent purchases have been for Lockheed, Consolidated and Martin planes. Earlier contracts were for Bell, Curtiss-Wright and Douglas craft.

Pleven said additional contracts are near completion for North American and Boeing models. He estimated the Boeing contract would approximate $25,000,000.

The invasion of Holland and Belgium, Pleven told reporters, had not affected the plane-purchasing program because the Allies already were buying all they could and asking the fastest possible deliveries.

Asked whether the planes were being delivered fast enough, he replied: "They are never fast enough."

Waves Of Selling Scuttle Prices In Wheat Mart

WINNIPEG, May 14—Waves of hectic selling rocked the trading floor of the Winnipeg grain exchange today, slashing more than five cents from wheat futures prices and knocking allowable limits from all coarse grain prices except those of rye. The general liquidation left wheat quotations 4½-5⅛ cents lower.

CHICAGO, May 14—Wheat on the board of trade today tumbled 10 cents a bushel, the limit, in a wave of liquidation, prompted by Allied reverses abroad. Dollar wheat was wiped off the board.

July contracts sold at 95⅝, off 10, and May contracts tumbled to 95¾, also off the limit allowed in one day's trading.

Britain Spends $62,000,000 With Firms In Canada

LONDON, May 14—The British supply board announced yesterday that orders approximating £14,000,000 ($62,000,000) have already been placed with Canadian firms as part of the £89,000,000 the British government will spend in the dominion in the first year of the war for war materials and others supplies.

The supply board statement said it is expected that contracts aggregating £34,000,000 more will be awarded shortly. Its order almost exclusively will cover the purchase of finished products, including munitions and other manufactured material required for war purposes.

Workers Will Be Asked To Help Win War With Efforts

BOURNEMOUTH, England, May 14.—Ernest Bevin, trade union leader and new minister of labor, said last night he would ask Britain's workers to "work like hell to save the lives of our lads who are fighting."

In blunt language, Mr. Bevin told the labor party congress that the war cabinet must "not allow vested interests to stand in the way of maximum production."

"If trade union conditions have to be relaxed we shall take steps to see that everything is restored at the end of the war."

BE NICE FELLAS GERMANY ASKS THE BELGIANS

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

BERLIN, May 14. — "Dear listeners," said a voice on the German radio today, addressing itself to Belgians, "Germany doesn't want to bring upon you the horrors of war. All we wish is the right to march through your country. Belgium is too small to resist the force of German arms. Welcome your German brothers, who are fighting in the common cause against capitalism and plutocracy."

The message was broadcast in both the French and Flemish languages. The program ended with the new march of the German air force, "Bombs Against England."

Three Convicted For Breaches Of Canada Defence

OTTAWA, May 14—An Ontario supreme court petit jury today convicted three Ottawa men of printing and circulating anti-war pamphlets in contravention of the wartime defence of Canada regulations.

The accused were Harry Binder, 26, former parliamentary press gallery representative of the Toronto Communist newspaper, the Daily Clarion; Louis Binder, 22, Harry's brother and a former soldier with the Royal Canadian Engineers; and Arthur Roy Saunders, 27, a gold medallist at McGill university and since then an actuarial clerk in the insurance branch of the Dominion government.

OTTAWA, May 14.—Request for a court order declaring the Communist Party of Canada an illegal organization today followed conviction of three Ottawa men on charges of contravening the wartime defence of Canada regulations by publishing and circulating anti-war pamphlets.

Queen Wilhelmina Still Ruler Of Sovereign State

LONDON, May 14.—Queen Wilhelmina today proclaimed that she still rules a sovereign state and urged her people to remember the calamities and repeated resurrections of the past.

The Queen's proclamation said:

"The government are now in England. They are not prepared as a government to capitulate. Consequently the territory of the Netherlands remaining in our hands in Europe as well as in the East and West Indies continues to be a sovereign state, able to assert its place as a full member of the community of states and in particular in the joint deliberation of the Allies."

Heavy Losses Inflicted By R.A.F. Planes

LONDON, May 14—British fighting pilots were officially announced tonight to have "inflicted on the enemy at least four times the losses they have suffered themselves today."

The statement said British fighters "in almost every engagement have unhesitatingly attacked formations far larger than their own."

"In the day's work our fighter pilots have inflicted on the enemy at least four times the losses they have suffered themselves."

DROUGHT AREA UNDER BLANKET OF HEAVY SNOW

REGINA, May 14—A blanket of heavy, wet snow last night lay over Saskatchewan's former drought area in the southeastern corner of the province while newly-sown wheat lands over most of the remainder of the south sucked up moisture that came in lesser falls.

The heaviest precipitation fell in the southeast corner of the province, where many farm residents found it difficult to even produce gardens in 10 yeears of drought.

Moisture figures ranged from a quarter of an inch in southwestern area to more than an inch at eastern points.

The ground was white with snow at Moosomin and Grenfell, an inch and a half lay on the sidewalks at Carlyle, and Regina got snow during the afternoon which melted as it fell.

Regina's moisture totalled .43 of an inch, Carlyle had about three-quarters of an inch and an estimate at Estevan put precipitation close to an inch.

TWO CANADIAN PILOTS MISSING ON R. A. F. WORK

VANCOUVER, May 14.—Relatives of Flight Commander John Alexander Campbell and Pilot Officer Barry Morgan-Dean of the Royal Air Force were advised by the British air ministry yesterday the two former British Columbia men were "missing" since air operations of May 12.

Flight Commander Campbell, 27, had been with the R.A.F. 3½ years. He came from Willow Point, four miles east of Nelson, B.C., where his grandfather, J. J. Campbell resides.

The cable advising Mr. Campbell his grandson was missing added nothing further, but Mrs. G. Morgan-Dean of Vancouver was told her son was "believed to have lost his life."

Pilot Officer Morgan-Dean learned to fly in Vancouver and joined the R.A.F. in 1937. He was 23.

$4,500,000 Water Project Is Urged

Calling for a Dominion government expenditure of $4,500,000, a water storage project in the southern part of the province was advocated Tuesday when a delegation from the Southern Alberta Water Conservation Council interviewed Premier William Aberhart and members of his cabinet at the legislative buildings. Following the meeting which was general in its discussions, it was announced that the delegation would make written submissions to the government.

F.D.R. STARTS MOVE TO SPEED U.S. DEFENCES

Extraordinary Defence Fund Is Requested By President

WASHINGTON, May 14—President Roosevelt acted yesterday to speed up the country's armament, working with military and fiscal officials on a request to congress for an extraordinary defence fund which reliable sources said would probably exceed $500,000,000.

Initial reaction to the news of his intention indicated that, as a result of the total war now raging in Europe, his recommendation would have many supporters in both house and senate no matter how large it might be.

FAVORS BILLION FUND

Chairman Andrew May of the House Military Committee, who, with Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Group, was called to confer with Mr. Roosevelt today, told reporters he favored an additional $1,000,000,000 for the army and navy combined.

President Roosevelt asked congress to make $2,900,000 available immediately for the construction of seacoast defences in Puerto Rico, and to grant the treasury an additional $12,500,000 for the purchase of strategic and critical defence materials in the next fiscal year.

Loans to the French, British and Belgium governments are forbidden by the Johnson Act, which outlaws advances to debt-defaulting nations, and credits to all belligerent governments are barred by the Neutrality Act.

WANTS CREDITS GRANTED

Representative Alfred Bulwinkle, North Carolina Democrat, introduced legislation to permit the Allied governments to buy on credit anything they might want except "arms, ammunition and implements of war." His proposal would alter portions of both the Neutrality law and the Johnson Act.

But Representative Hamilton Fish, New York Republican, told the House that "instead of weakening the Johnson Act, Congress should stop the loopholes whereby loans and credits may be extended to foreign nations by our governmental agencies."

"The repeal of the Johnson Act would mean sending our dollars abroad," he added, "to be followed by American soldiers to foreign battlefields."

9 PROVINCIAL WAR SAVINGS AIDES NAMED

OTTAWA, May 14—Appointment of nine provincial war savings committee chairmen was announced Monday by Hon. J. L. Ralston, minister of finance.

They included: British Columbia, Christopher Spencer, Vancouver; Alberta, John Burns, Calgary; Saskatchewan, W. G. Yule, Regina; Manitoba, E. J. Garr, Winnipeg; Ontario, R. V. Lesueur, Toronto.

"Our fight for freedom brings with it added responsibilities for every Canadian," Mr. Ralston said in making the announcement. "It augurs well for this undertaking that these nine men, who are undoubted leaders in their respective provinces, have accepted enthusiastically the responsibility and added burden for this task.

"The provincial chairmen will surround themselves with other willing and representative workers, who understand that this war must be fought through to the finish with every force at our command. The issue of war savings certificates will provide a means of enlistment on the economic front. No mite is too small, and in the aggregate, a widespread response to the efforts of these men may well produce the ship, the supplies, the gun, or even the shell that brings us victory."

MANNING DEPOT AT BRANDON TO TAKE RECRUITS

OTTAWA, May 14—Arrangements now are being made for preliminary training of personnel under the British Commonwealth Air training plan in Western Canada at No. 2 Manning depot in Brandon, Man., the defence department said last night. Recruits for schools now in operation have, heretofore, been obtained through the Toronto Manning depot for the last eight months.

With development of the joint air training plan, and establishment of schools in western provinces, it has been decided to provide for the creation of instructional facilities well in advance of actual personnel requirements.

From the Manning depot in Brandon, recruits will be distributed to the initial training school in Regina, if selected for instruction as pilots, air observers or air gunners. Others will proceed to the technical training school at St. Thomas, Ont., for instruction as aero engine mechanics, airframe mechanics or fabric workers. A number likely will go to the equipment and accounting training school, also functioning at St. Thomas, while some may fill clerical or other positions.

Britain's Secret Fighter Plane Now Being Used Against Nazis At Front

LONDON, May 14.—Britain's new secret fighter plane with a sting in its tail is being used in the fierce air battles for supremacy over the Nazis over Netherlands and Belgium.

Air ministry statements mentioned for the first time Sunday the new two-seater fighter, "Defiant," in telling of action over the low countries.

In addition to an unknown number of machine-guns firing from forward positions, the Defiant is equipped with a power-operated gun turret aft.

This new fighter, whose details are secret, was known to have been in large scale production last winter, and is believed to have appeared in surprising numbers in air battles over the lowlands where the Royal Air Force reported bringing down at least 135 German warplanes since Friday morning.

The Defiant is powered by a 1,030 horsepower Rolls Royce Merlin engine. It is a low wing, all metal monoplane.

The British reported early last February that they had the new fighter in production as an answer to a new type of German fast long-range bomber which was expected to make its appearance this spring.

The power-driven turret is designed to swing easily at high speeds, whereas ordinary turrets are difficult to operate because of the wind pressure. The turret permits a broadside attack on a formation of enemy planes.

Ring Of New, Rebuilt Forts Are Belgium's Hope Of Protecting Liege

By The Canadian Press

A ring of new and rebuilt forts, as well as the Albert canal, is Belgium's hope of protecting Liege, keystone of the nation's defences, against duplication of its capture by invading Germans in 1914.

As a bar to invasion of the industrial city and its citadel, the Belgians erected 12 forts between 1888 and 1892 in an irregular circle around Liege with a radius of about four miles.

A gap of five or six miles along the Meuse river left an opening where Kaiser Wilhelm's legions entered in August, 1914. The advance started Aug. 4, and the last of the Liege forts fell Aug. 16.

After the last war, the Belgians rebuilt these forts and completed four new ones to cover the approaches from Germany, some of them 10 to 12 miles outside Liege.

The Albert canal, running north from Liege to the Dutch frontier, weighed heavily in Belgium's defence calculations, since Germany outflanked Liege from the north in 1914. The fort of Ebenemal was built at the juncture of the canal and the Meuse.

Between the forts are pill box defences.

FUNDS FREED TO LOWLANDS TO BUY ARMS

Exemptions To Order By President Roosevelt Are Announced

WASHINGTON, May 14—The United States yesterday made available to Holland and Belgium their large cash resources in the United States for purchase of defence weapons and other purposes.

Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau granted blanket exemptions to the governments of Belgium and the Netherlands from President Roosevelt's order last Friday prohibiting any withdrawals of Dutch or Belgian funds from United States without treasury licenses.

Morgenthau's action left the president's order in effect, as applied to citizens and business firms of the two countries, except for four banks and trading companies in the Netherland East Indies, for which blanket exemptions also were granted.

Officials indicated envoys of Holland and Belgium had told the treasury their governments need their funds. Besides defence needs, the Dutch minister in Washington has been planning to act as paymaster for other Dutch officials abroad.

No figures on the governmental deposits of the two countries were available, but Morgenthau's order was believed to have freed many millions of dollars.

Officials said the situation in Holland and Belgium was different from that of the other three countries invaded recently by Germany, because their governments were in a position to give voluntary direction of the uses of their money. No such exemptions have been granted to Norway, Denmark or Luxembourg.

CANUCK TROOPS HEAR BROADCAST OF HOME NEWS

ALDERSHOT, May 14. — Officers and men crowded around radios in the quarters of the 1st Canadian Division last night to hear a broadcast of news from home, provided by The Canadian Press and brought to them by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

It was the first time the men had heard directly of news happenings on the home front. The broadcast will be brought to them each week.

"This is just the kind of service the men of the division far away from home deeply appreciate," said Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, general officer commanding the division. "I sincerely hope it will be continued."

Cheers arose simultaneously from different quarters of the camp as the announcer read the news that Toronto Maple Leafs are in last place in the International Baseball League.

Officers Complete Inspection Of Two Lethbridge Units

LETHBRIDGE, May 14.—Brigadier R. A. Fraser, of Montreal, and Major H. A. Sparling, a brigade major in the second division, prepared to fly to Edmonton last night after having completed their inspection of the 20th and 108th anti-tank batteries, R.C.A., here Monday. The officers are making a general inspection of units of the second division of the Canadian Active Service Forces.

EGYPT BEGINS MOVE CIVILIAN POPULATIONS

Abandonment Of Homes Is Ordered In Important Border Centres

ALEXANDRIA, May 14—Egypt began removing civilian populations of all strategic western desert towns along the Libyan frontier yesterday.

The military governor ordered immediate abandonment of all homes at three important centres, Mersa Matruh, Sidi Barrani and Sollum.

It was in furtherance of Egypt's preparations "for all emergencies and surprises"—with a view to a possible war move by Italy.

Last night was the last night of all-Egyptian blackouts in the test of defence against aircraft, but officials announced the blackout would continue in Cairo and other cities.

Government sources declared the Mediterranean situation was "slightly reassuring," but emphasized that Egypt must constantly be "exceptionally cautious and vigilant."

Anti-British demonstration in Rome contributed to uneasiness.

The Allied warfleet, engulfed yesterday in a "dust-out" as a swirling sandstorm limited visibility to a few hundred feet, apparently was scheduled for a long stay.

EUROPE CRISIS AIDS ARGUMENT FOR THIRD TERM

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The increased acuteness of the European crisis was regarded by some politicians yesterday as having simplified the principal problem of the third-term supporters—that of convincing President Roosevelt he should run again.

The president has made clear his own view that the Nazi invasion of Holland and Belgium has intensified a situation which could in the end prove extremely harmful to the United States.

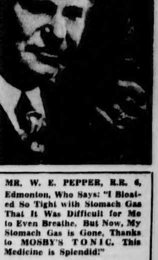

The third termers are expected to point to the seriousness of the situation as an argument why the president should run. In turn, Republicans and other anti-Roosevelt men are preparing to argue just the reverse—that world conditions call for a new hand at the helm.

Gassy Stomach Distress Relieved! A Local Man Endorses Mosby's Tonic

Mr. Pepper, of R.R. 6, Edmonton, So Bloated with Gas He Had Sharp Pains and Breathlessness . . . Couldn't Sleep . . . He Now Says: "Mosby's Tonic Relieved My Suffering; I Feel Years Younger!"

MR. W. E. PEPPER, R.R. 6, Edmonton, Who Says: "I Bloated So Tight with Stomach Gas That It Was Difficult for Me to Even Breathe. But Now, My Stomach Gas is Gone, Thanks to MOSBY'S TONIC. This Medicine is Splendid!"

As time goes on, it becomes more and more apparent to the people of Edmonton that Mosby's Tonic is a medicine of True, Genuine Merit. This is a New, Scientific Mixture of Nature's Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents, now being introduced to crowds daily here in Edmonton by a Special Mosby's Tonic Representative, known as The MOSBY TONIC Man, at the Army & Navy Dept. Store. Leading Druggists throughout this entire Edmonton section are reporting increasing sales of Mosby's Tonic. And at the same time, some of the city's best known residents are coming forward with Sincere Statements, describing what Mosby's Tonic did for them and endorsing it to others who suffer in the same way. Drug men say nothing like this has ever occurred here before. Among the latest well-known local residents who praise Mosby's Tonic, none is more enthusiastic than Mr. W. E. Pepper, R.R. 6, Edmonton. His statement appears as follows:

Stomach Gas Made His Breathing Difficult

"I had a long period of suffering with stomach gas and bloat," said Mr. Pepper. "I bloated so bad after every meal and swelled so tight with gas that it was difficult for me to breathe, in fact, I finally got so I was AFRAID TO EAT, because I actually thought I might fill up with so much gas that it would almost stop my breathing. The pain from this gas and bloat was so intense that I can't even describe it. I couldn't get my proper sleep at night because of it and sometimes I would lie awake for hours at a time and wonder if I would ever get relief. I was subject to headaches and my bowels were very sluggish and almost always constipated.

Mosby's Tonic Gave Splendid Relief

"I spent considerable money trying to get relief from this suffering. Even tried dieting and special treatments, but never found anything that really helped me. So you can see that I was a badly discouraged person, and didn't know if I would ever feel any better. But finally I found Mosby's Tonic and will say to you that I never saw anything act like this medicine. It worked the gas and bloat accumulations from my stomach organs and now I eat anything and actually don't know what stomach gas is any more. I have to smile now when I think how afraid I used to be that the stomach gas would stop my breathing. You can be sure I don't have any trouble getting my breath now! The pains are gone from my stomach and I can go to bed and sleep all night and get up feeling fresh and rested. My bowels are more regular since I took Mosby's Tonic than they have been IN YEARS. I have lots of new energy and feel years younger. All my friends can see the change in me and I tell them, 'Mosby's Tonic did it.' I'd pay $10.00 a bottle for this medicine if I had to. It is splendid."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys

MOSBY'S TONIC contains 20 Ingredients, including 15 Roots and Herbs. It acts on the bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys. Makes weak, worn out people feel different all over. The price of this New, Scientific Compound is reasonable, due to the immense volume in which it sells. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby's Tonic—TODAY!

A Special Mosby's Tonic Representative, known as The MOSBY TONIC Man, is now at the ARMY AND NAVY DEPT. STORE, Edmonton, daily meeting crowds of people and introducing and explaining this New Compound.

"Every Human Being"

President Roosevelt told the American Scientific Congress, "What has come about (in the era of new aggression) has been caused solely by those who would use, and are using, your inventions of peace in a wholly different cause—those who seek to dominate hundreds of millions of people in vast continental areas—those, who if successful in that aim, will we must now admit enlarge their wild dream to encompass every human being and every mile of the earth's surface."

The gathering of scientists from the western hemisphere heard nothing new in this, though they may not have traced the inescapable inference so courageously to its conclusion. Between aggression and self-government there can be no compromise territorial arrangement that would last. The lust for power expands with success, always has, and in the anture of itself must. The world cannot be one-half free and the other half slave. For centuries freedom has been "slowly broadening down from precedent to precedent" and also spreading from people to people. The aggressors propose to reverse the trend, at whatever cost of life and wealth, by the mis-employment of the very inventions science has devised for the benefit of mankind.

Mr. Roosevelt did not propose that the American republics should take the field to halt this attempt to put mankind in chains. But he boldly stated the world-wide purpose of the war-lords. And he stressed the point, it is to be hoped convincingly, that neutrality does not imply mental vacuity.

What Will Canada Do?

Most Canadians have probably been asking themselves what Canada can do, will do, and should do, in view of the furious offensive started by the enemy on the western front and the possibility—always present—that he might win through to the coast and launch his air forces upon England. And answering these questions according to amateur judgment or preconceived notions, strongly influenced by horror and resentment at the sheer brutality of the attack on the little neutral countries.

Prime Minister King has also answered these questions, in the general terms in which alone the responsible head of an Allied Government could speak. Canada, he said, will go on doing what in the judgment of the Allied authorities it can best do to make victory certain. That is what Canada has been doing from the outset, and nothing has happened to show that the course was not the proper one.

This offensive, it must be remembered, was not a "bolt from the blue," save in the selection of the moment of delivery. It has been expected from the day war was declared. There was general expectation, encouraged by Allied spokesmen, that it would happen sooner. It was taken into consideration at London and Paris when the plan of Allied operations was drafted. Canada's war effort was determined, in agreement with the Allied Governments and military experts, in the light of certainty that the present situation would soon or later arise.

The scheme of our effort may be modified or accelerated, but the nature of the effort itself is not likely to be changed materially. We can trust the Allied authorities to have known what part they wanted Canada to play.

The Enemy Within the Gates

In some respects the most serious menace Holland and Belgium had to face was not the frontal attack by Nazi forces. It was the treachery of Germans who had been living in these countries; and who repaid the hospitality extended to them by turning against their hosts when the invasion began, seized airports, committed acts of sabotage, and attacked detachments of Dutch and Belgian troops from ambush far behind the borders.

This was no spontaneous uprising of persons whose race sympathy proved to be stronger than their honesty. It was a concerted movement, bearing all the marks of previous arrangement and preparation. The ingrates had no trouble getting arms with which to shoot down Dutch and Belgian soldiers; they had them ready to hand. Each group knew exactly what it was supposed to do. These "cells" made up the "fifth column" of the invaders, whose business was to attack from within while the uniformed columns attacked from without.

One inevitable result of this fresh demonstration of organized treason is that German people living in Britain and other countries have been put under preventive custody in the mass, while large numbers have been rounded up and put in internment camps. The treatment is of course deserved in some cases, but undoubtedly not deserved in others. Unfortunately it is not possible to draw a line of distinction with any degree of assurance, and the innocent have to suffer with the guilty. In countries more remote from the scene the public and public authorities are certain to be asking themselves now whether there are "fifth columns" in these countries also. And asking it under circumstances which strongly suggest there are.

Nazi methods have cast the imputation of treachery upon German people living in all parts of the world. Fair-minded persons will not believe that this blanket accusation is deserved. But where innocent Germans living abroad suffer because of it they will have Hitler and his plotters to blame for the suspicion aroused against them, and for any restrictions to which they may be subjected because of it.

A British force has been landed in Iceland, to see that the Nazis do not establish submarine or airplane bases there. The "invaders" didn't of course drop bombs on any Iceland homes or shoot anybody. They landed by consent, the authorities having no doubt that they will keep the promise to not interfere with the local administration and to get out when the war is over.

Sweden does not feel, as some Balkan states do, that it is safe because Nazi forces have been hurled against the Low Countries and the western front. On the contrary, its Government met the new situation by ordering a complete black-out, and strewing mine fields in coastal waters which have been hitherto open to navigation. Stockholm may even have gathered from the experience of Norway, Holland and Belgium that it is poor business to wait until Berlin is ready to strike.

Pope Pius spoke in no uncertain tones when he openly gave his moral support to the little peoples now struggling for the right to live securely under their own governments and institutions. At Berlin, it is said, the announcement was received with "indifference". Anger would be the correct term. Even Nazi assurance can hardly pretend to be unaware that the influence of the Pope counts for something on a moral issue. If Adolf has any doubts on the matter he might ask Benito.

The Passing Show

By MAX FREEDMAN

What is Mr. Churchill's record on the menace embodied in Nazi Germany? We all know in a general sort of way that he has been a fierce and unflagging critic of Hitler and the policies of aggression pursued by the Reich. But he has never been given sufficient credit for the daring prescience with which he foresaw the horrors Hitler would one day let loose upon the world. As Mr. Churchill takes up the heavy burden of national leadership at this time of danger it may not be amiss to recall his attitude to Nazi Germany over a period of years as defined in his own matchless eloquence.

THE PREMIER AND GERMANY

Even before Hitler seized power Mr. Churchill tarried to point a warning finger at the new insurgent spirit that was beginning to dominate Germany. On November 23, 1932, he said: "All these bands of sturdy Teutonic youths, marching throught the streets and roads of Germany, with the light of desire in their eyes to suffer for their Fatherland, are not looking for status. They are looking for weapons, and, when they have the weapons, believe me they will then ask for the return of lost territories and lost colonies, and when that demand is made it cannot fail to shake and possibly shatter to their very foundations every one of the countries I have mentioned, and some other countries I have not mentioned."

In that same speech he declared that "every concession which has been made—many concessions have been made, and many more will be made and ought to be made—has been followed immediately by a fresh demand."

Then, when Germany dedicated her energies to the erection of a sinister war machine whose shadow slowly but steadily began to creep upon the menaced figure of freedom, Mr. Churchill's voice never ceased echoing the warning that Englishmen "would be blackmailed out of their skins" unless they armed with heroic vigor to offset the Nazi challenge. "We may, within a measurable period of time, in the life-time of those who are here, if we are not in a proper state of security, be confronted on some occasion with a visit from an ambassador (German) and may have to give an answer in a few hours; and if that answer is not satisfactory, within the next few hours the crash of bombs and the roar of London and cataracts of masonry and fire and smoke will appraise us of any inadequacy which has been permitted in our aerial defences."

Mr. Churchill uttered these words in the Commons on February 7, 1934. He foresaw, more than four years before the event, that threat of an air attack upon England, which Hitler used so effectively at the time of the Munich agreement.

When Mr. Eden resigned as foreign secretary following criticism directed at him by the Italian press Mr. Churchill said: "This last week has been a good week for the dictators—one of the best they ever had. The German dictator has laid his heavy hand upon a small and historic country (Austria) and the Italian dictator has carried his vendetta to a successful conclusion against Mr. Eden."

HIS WARNINGS COME TRUE

Of the annexation of Austria he remarked: "Europe is confronted with a program of aggression, nicely calculated and timed, unfolding stage by stage, and there is only one choice open, not only to us, but to other countries who are unfortunately concerned—either to submit, like Austria, or else to take effective measures while time remains to ward off the danger and, if it cannot be warded off, to cope with it. Resistance will be hard, yet I am persuaded—and the prime minister's speech confirms me—that it is to this conclusion of resistance to overweening encroachment that his Majesty's Government will come, and the House of Commons will certainly support them in playing a great part in the effort to preserve the peace of Europe, and if it cannot be preserved, to preserve the freedom of the nations of Europe.

"If we were to delay, if we were to go on waiting upon events for a considerable period, how much should we throw away of resources which are now available for our security and for the maintenance of peace? How many friends would be alienated, how many potential allies should we see go, one by one, down the grisly gulf, how many would bluff ourselves, until behind bluff ever-gathering forces had accumulated reality?

"Where shall we be two years hence, for instance, when the German army will certainly be much stronger than the French army, and when all the small nations will have fled from Geneva to pay homage to the ever-waxing power of the Nazi system and to make the best terms they can for themselves?"

Those prophetic words were spoken by Mr. Churchill on the floor of parliament on March 14, 1938, three days after the German troops crossed the Austrian frontier. Never has the accuracy of a prophecy been so sustained by the march of events. His description of the Munich agreement as a "total and unmitigated disaster" for Britain is too fresh in our minds to need emphasis.

Mr. Churchill was right, overwhelmingly right, in dealing with the German problem in peace. If his insight is as certain in war-time, he will earn a renown greater than that of Chatham and equal to the solitary grandeur of William Pitt, whose place is supreme in the gallery of English statesmen. What is more important, however, he will have led England and her spacious empire to victory over dark and turbulent forces whose challenge goes to the root of every noble ideal of life. Of one thing we may be confident. The might of England will be wielded like the force of some fierce and avenging thunderbolt in the hands of her new leader.

Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, had a heckler at one of his meetings arrested for shouting, "What have you got to say about Hitler and his reptiles?" Apparently Sir Oswald dislikes free speech when it is critical of Fascism, the right to uphold which he insists upon maintaining in defiance of popular opinion. Or can it be that the Fascist leader could think of no answer to the heckler's question?—Montreal Gazette.

Liberal Spirit Endangered

The universalities (in Poland) were served by men whose first obligation was to civilization and to international learning. So long as the spirit of men like St. Thomas More, Erasmus, and Colet survives, the wrongs of the professors from Poland and Czecho-Slovakia must awaken a deep and passionate resentment among teachers and men of learning in all countries. Why do our public men, disregarding the multiplied evidences that American sympathy is overwhelmingly with those who fight against such dictatorships as those of Hitler and Stalin, seek after the applause of the timid few who tremble before the ruthlessness of a bloody-handed tyrant. They would "shush" every utterance that told in simple words American abhorrence of the Stalin-Hitler alliance, and its brutal inhumanity, injustice and rapine, practised at the expense of those who cannot defend themselves?—Chicago Daily News.

War Doesn't Suit Him

The British Navy has lost some of its fire and audacity, declares Kaltenborn, the radio commentator.

Kaltenborn has had trouble with the British before.

They let him down at Munich, after he had heroically strained his voice on the air pointing out Britain's duty in saving Czechland.

That note of chagrin in Kaltenborn's voice would have raised a lump in your throat when he pointed out that Britain and France had failed in their duty to democracy—and the Czechs.

Since then this Kaltenborn and his playmates have gone swinging down the airways pointing out Britain's mistakes.

The navy was asleep to let the Germans land in Norway.

They have lost the old fire.

If the navy had the old Kaltenborn fire, they would now be steaming toward Portsmouth long before this with the German fleet in tow.

But they have lost the old fire, they haven't taken a capital ship prisoner yet.

The best this fire-lacking navy has been able to do is to sink all the German ships that weren't fast enough to get away, or quick enough to scuttle themselves—and patrol the seven seas—and convoy the shipping to Great Britain—and break into the land-locked Baltic—but why go on, they lack the old fire—the old Kaltenborn fire.—Thomas R. Henry, in Toronto Telegram.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

Today is the anniversary of the May 14, 1794, when John Butler of Niagara died. One of the greatest Loyalist leaders in war, he was after the peace a leader to those others who sacrificed their all to be true to their British connection. Of Irish descent, Butler, like all his family's men, was a soldier. He served under Sir William Johnson and took part in the capture of Fort Niagara, in 1759, a few weeks before the French were defeated on the Plains of Abraham, Quebec. Later he was employed in Rangers were of immense value to General Amherst in that wonderful expedition which brought about the capitulation of Montreal.

When the Revolution came, John Butler, with his father, refused to forsake king and flag. Butler reorganized his corps of Rangers, thus winning for himself more hatred and more abuse from American historians than any other figure among the Loyalists . . . The raid of Butler's Rangers through the Mohawk Valley of New York state in September, 1778, is one of the most dramatic of all the dramas of that war. . . . A price had been set upon Butler's head; his wife and family were interned at Albany; his home was intimidated by . . . his son, Walter, had been captured under a flag of truce and sentenced to death as a spy, and John Butler had ample excuse to be ruthless. John played the game by protecting prisoners, but Walter, who enrolled a company of the Rangers, was a "Bloodthirsty Butler." The father was blamed for a good deal that the son did.

After the peace John Butler crossed to the British side of the Niagara river, founding that colony of Loyalists from whom have come so many eminent sons and daughters of Canada. At the time of his death John Butler was superintendent-general of Indian affairs and his death was much lamented by Governor Simcoe, who attended the military funeral given to the great Ranger.

STEERWAY

At sea the fishing boats have plenty of steerway. They may turn and circle, in pursuit of a big fish, without concern for rock or collision. There is a sense of freedom on the great waters that one scarcely finds on land.

So it is in the mental and spiritual realm. Persons who think wide thoughts and read great literature have room for navigation. Their souls enjoy a liberty unknown to others. They are free of the perils of littleness and constriction.

Christians whose life is hid with Christ know that "His service is perfect freedom." They sail on the vast ocean of love, and know a liberty denied to worldlings.

Lift us up into the larger life of freedom which is the birthright of all Thy Children. O Father in heaven. Having been set free by Thy Son, we are free indeed. Amen.

Read Psalm 31:1-9.

Canadians returning from other countries in 1939 brought almost $9,000,000 worth of goods into Canada duty free under the hundred dollars exemption provided in the customs tariff.

Copper exports from Canada during the first two months of 1940 amounted to 87,925,000 pounds compared with 74,987,800 pounds in the corresponding period of 1939.

Not Asked to Sing

Editor, Bulletin: As president of the Edmonton Male Chorus, I have received many enquiries during the last few days as to the reason why the Chorus did not sing at the concert which concluded the Edmonton Musical Festival last Friday. My answer was that we did not sing because we had not been asked. To the question why we had not been asked I had to answer that I did not know.

It does seem strange. The Edmonton Male Chorus won high praise from the adjudicator and won the highest marks of any choral group in the festival. Yet this chorus, after being awarded the Hamilton trophy for the most artistic performance in the choral classes, was not even asked to sing at the final concert. The Kiwanis Club with marks of 56½ and 57¼ sang again at the concert—to the great delight of all who heard them. Yet the Edmonton Male Chorus, whose singing of "Men of Eric" on Thursday evening so delighted Mr. Arthur Benjamin, the adjudicator, that he requested them, then and there, to sing it again—surely something unique in the annals of the Edmonton Musical Festival—was not placed on Friday night's program at all.

This is not the first time this has happened. Last year there was somewhat similar situation. In fact it is some years since the Edmonton Male Chorus has appeared on the final concert program. Why this discrimination? If there is friction between officials it is time it was brought out into the open, and the situation clarified. In all fairness to the many people who bought tickets for last Friday's concert and expected to hear the Male Chorus sing; in fairness to Mr. Hendre who has trained and conducted the Chorus for so many years, and who has received so many favorable adjudications on its work; and in fairness to all those who have worked to further the cause of Male Chorus singing in Edmonton, it is imperative that the present policy of discrimination against the Edmonton Male Chorus as practised by an official or two officials, of the Edmonton Festival be discontinued.

MAURICE ROOKWOOD.
President,
Edmonton Male Chorus.

McCoy Health Service

Hay fever is sometimes called hay asthma, or summer catarrh, and is marked by its characteristic symptoms of sneezing, the discharge of a watery mucus from the nose, and a feeling of fullness within the nasal membrane. The symptoms also include watering and itching of the eyes.

The attacks may return at the same time each year and the patient may thus be able to predict in advance the date upon which the attack will start. For a long time, the regular return of the attacks remained a mystery, but the work of Bostock and others, established the fact that the attacks accompanied the dispersion through the air of the pollen of plants. Hay fever was thus found to be related to the pollen season.

Although many hay fever victims are sensitive to pollens, there are other substances capable of acting as exciting causes of hay fever in those who are susceptible. For example, face powder, certain kinds of dust, feathers, fur, and different foods seem to act as exciting causes in some instances.

The first treatment advised consisted of telling the patient to remove himself from the substance to which he was sensitive. Thus, those sensitive to pollens were sent to other districts free from pollen. The patients having the means to follow this advice sometimes received good results—sometimes they succeeded in finding a new irritant in the new neighborhood.

In securing real relief from hay fever, the most important point to keep in mind is not to try to take the patient away from the irritant, but to try to restore to him the state of being immune which is enjoyed by the person who never has hay fever. Certainly, there is some systemic cause present which makes the pollen or other substance the power to bring on the abnormal reaction.

A treatment which is based on removing the systemic cause will help many patients to overcome hay fever to such an extent that they remain completely free from it, regardless of how often they come in contact with the same pollens which previously induced the attacks.

Although the attack may be brought about by exposure to the pollen of various plants, and exposure to other substances, such exposure is not the main cause. The fundamental cause is really of constitutional origin and the attack is due to the discharge of irritating toxins through the mucous membrane of the nose.

These toxins are found in a blood stream surcharged with the end products of carbohydrates and fats in food. Because of the inability of the eliminative organs to throw off these waste materials, they begin to accumulate, and a portion is discharged through the mucous membrane. The membrance becomes congested, and thus rendered more or less irritated sufficiently by the breathing in of pollen to produce the attack of hay fever.

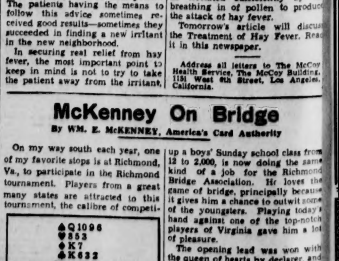

Tomorrow's article will discuss the Treatment of Hay Fever. Read it in this newspaper.

McKenney On Bridge

By WM. E. McKENNEY, America's Card Authority

On my way south each year, one of my favorite stops is at Richmond, Va., to participate in the Richmond tournament. Players from a great many states are attracted to this tournament, the calibre of competition is high, and the spirit of southern hospitality is well exemplified there.

Bridge in Richmond is headed by Major Clarence Wyatt. This venerable, white-haired southern gentleman, who some years ago built up a boys' Sunday school class from 12 to 2,000, is now doing the same kind of a job for the Richmond Bridge Association. He loves the game of bridge, principally because it gives him a chance to outwit some of the youngsters. Playing today's hand against one of the top-notch players of Virginia gave him a lot of pleasure.

The opening lead was won with the queen of hearts by declarer, and now you can see what his problem is. If the clubs break 3-3, he will be able to make three clubs, three diamonds, and three heart tricks.

Before trying the club finesse, declarer decided to see what kind of a break he could reel in spades. He led a small spade and finessed the 10-spot in dummy. Without hesitation, Major Wyatt (East) won with the King, not the Jack.

He returned a heart, declarer won, and then felt perfectly safe in finessing another spade, thinking he had located the Jack in the West hand. The 9-spot was finessed, the Major won with the Jack, and returned another heart, knocking out declarer's last heart stopper.

Now it was too late for South to try to establish the club suit, and thus, by a little bit of deception, the Major defeated the contract.

Farmers in the Lacombe and Red Deer districts report heavy casualties among their young pigs this spring. NAZIS ATTACK CHEMIST FOR GAS FORMULA

LOS ANGELES, May 14—Police examined acid burns on a wall yesterday and heard a story from Carl Albin, Swiss chemist, which seemed to bring a phase of the European war right to Los Angeles.

Albin, brought here by an oil company to perfect his leadless, high test gasoline which he declared would increase the speed and cruising range of military aircraft, said he was beset in his laboratory early Monday by two German-speaking men who demanded his formula.

The chemist told Detective Lieut. R. L. Berry he smashed a light bulb, but the powerfully built men overpowered him in the darkness and started to leave with his documents. In desperation, he hurled a half-gallon container of sulphuric acid and one of the men cried:

"Get me out of here. I'm blinded."

Albin said he recovered his brief case and ran after the men, one of them fired at him several times before they escaped in a gray coupe.

CONCENTRATIONS OF TROOPS SEEN IN SOUTH NORWAY

STOCKHOLM, May 14—With Sweden calmly preparing for any emergency, neutral military observers last night heard reports of extensive German troop concentrations in southern Norway and of increased troop transport movements through Germany's Kiel canal.

Rumors of ship and troop transport movements in the Kiel canal, connecting the North and Baltic seas, increased during the day, but could not be confirmed. There was no hint even of the direction of the canal movements.

Mrs. Nielsen, Only Woman M.P. In Government Pledges Her Aid To Western Canada Farmers

OTTAWA, May 14.—A slender, black haired wife and mother who for 13 years has known the hardship, toil and anxieties of a pioneer home in northern Saskatchewan, Mrs. Peter Nielsen this week is familiarizing herself with Ottawa and Parliament Hill where, on Thursday, she will take her seat as member of the House of Commons for North Battleford.

Candidate of a group united to forget party interests and elect members who would devote themselves to immediate needs of the western farmers, Mrs. Neilsen campaigned over her 20,000 square mile riding as a unity candidate to gain a substantial majority over the seasoned former Liberal member, Cameron McIntosh.

"I am what might be called 'an instructed delegate' sent here to fight for certain pressing needs of distressed western farmers," Mrs. Nielsen said, "but I am free to support any political group that sponsors the cause of my electors."

Mrs. Nielsen has no illusions about the life that has been so suddenly opened for her. While she has spent the last 13 years in a log cabin, striving with her husband, Peter Nielsen, to carve out a home in the wilderness and raise their family of three children, she had seen much of life before she went to western Canada.

FIRST GREAT WAR

Born in London, she was at school in Belgium when the first Great War started. She returned at once to her home and, as a high school girl, witnessed most of the German air raids on London. She fears that the present conflict will bring even more frightful experiences.

"It is a most critical time for me to gain my first experience in parliament," Mrs. Nielsen said, "and I know everybody will be mainly concerned with the war effort. But we must not neglect the immediate domestic problems and those that will inevitably arise after the war. If we neglect those problems we will lose the war even if we defeat our enemies in the field."

PLATFORM

Adequate prices for farm products, education and medical reform and elimination of profiteering are the basic planks in Mrs. Nielsen's platform.

Mrs. Nielsen visited Parliament Hill Saturday. Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, clerk of the House of Commons, greeted the new member, who will be the only woman in the chamber, had her sign the roll and take the oath, and assigned her to the sixth floor office quarters, occupied for 18 years by Agnes Macphail, first woman to be elected to the Canadian parliament.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

What To Do

Two boys are always asking my friend Jane and me for dates, but my girl friend always manages to get the attention of both boys while I sit in the corner by myself. What can I do? I don't want to hurt any one's feelings. MARY LOU.

Answer—First of all, come out of the corner. Don't let your friend get all the attention. She apparently is not worrying about your feelings so don't worry too much about hers. You certainly can get some attention and a good start is to check up on yourself and see what's lacking. Are you cheerful? Do you make the most of your appearance? Is your conversation on the dull side? Are you a good listener? Make a special effort to be gay, friendly and interested in whatever is going on around you. Even though a boy tells you all over again what a wonderful play he made in such-and-such basketball game, be an interested listener or he will go and tell it to some other girl.

Debunker

Mr. Bob Davis, world traveller and photographer, says that the "queerest of all fallacies about human expression is that 'the eyes are the windows of the soul'." He calls this absolute rubbish. The eyes are quite lifeles organs which do not change with our moods and emotional states. They are merely glistening balls which serve as cameras in recording light and shadows for the brain. Soulful expressions do not centre in the eyes themselves, but in the areas around the eyes, such as the lids, brows and facial muscles. A person's face is a moving mirror of his emotions, but the eyes reveal nothing about what is going on in a person's soul.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a working wife. My husband has to wait for me to get home at night to cook his supper. I am cross and tired and hurriedly cook something—anything to call a meal. We have a 4-year-old boy whom my mother has to take care of for us during the day. Our case is the case of many others. My husband lost his job when the business he was in folded up in the depression.

* * *

He has now got a position that has lasted six months. He makes $16 a week and I make fifteen. Between the two wages we get along, but if I were to stop working how could a family of three live comfortably and have nourishing food that would be required, especially for a child, on what my husband earns? Let the people who are getting laws passed to bar married women from working outside of the home answer that. My dream of heaven is looking forward to the day when I can stay at home and be the wife and mother I should.,

MRS. E. S.

Answer:

I commend this woman's letter to all of those who assume that the married woman who forsakes her husband and children and home to go into business does so solely in order to get money to enable her to buy French finery and go to night clubs and indulge in extravagances that she couldn't on her husband's ample but modest salary.

If there are such women, they are few and far between. And in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, when a woman adds the burden of a job to her work as a housekeeper it is because she is driven to it by dire necessity.

Some of the unsung heroes who bear the cross without ever wearing the crown of glory are the tired, worn, overworked married women who stand all day behind a counter or bend over a typewriter in an office and then, exhausted almost beyond the point of endurance, go home to do another day's work cooking and scrubbing and cleaning, trying to make a home for their families. Fresh Air, Exercise Are Cure For Insomnia

By IDA JEAN KAIN

In the good old days, when one's living was earned by the sweat of the brow, insomnia was unheard of. That's because exercise of the large muscles produces the kind of physical tiredness that makes for sleep. Exercise of the small muscles—the eyes, or the fingers in skilled activity—produces nervous strain. Residual tension—that tension that carries over—leads to insomnia.

There are different types of insomnia: inability to get to sleep, fitful sleeping, or waking up hours before it is time to get up. After a time, insomnia of any kind makes you feel as if you are at the end of your rope! That increases your worry about sleeping. As a matter of fact, about 60 per cent of all insomnia is supposed to be caused by anxiety about it. You can even get so that you start worrying about noon for fear you will not get a good night's sleep—and the chances are that you won't. If you expect insomnia, you will have it.

Try to train yourself not to think about your work when you settle down to sleep. Thinking out an act is accompanied by a slight tension in the muscles, the tension spreads from one muscle group to another, and soon you are tossing about, afraid you will not be able to get to sleep at all, which further increases the tension.

Any number of schemes have been used for turning off the thought processes. Some people think black—a deep, velvety black. Others try to make their minds blank, like a slate. When a thought comes on, they wipe the slate clean. Then there is the trick of contracting each set of muscles separately and then letting go with all the muscles.

Waking up in the night is often caused by indigestion. The solution to that is to have a light meal, avoiding fried or other heavy foods and stimulating beverages. You should take plenty of time to eat and it might be a good idea to have the evening meal a bit earlier.

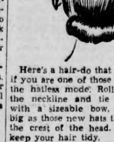

Outside influences like light and noise are sleep thieves. Sleep shades which cover the eyes can be purchased at department stores and ear plugs, made of wax and cotton so they do not harm the ears, are on sale at most drug stores.

Enough physical exercise is not the whole answer but it seems to be the surest cure for insomnia. Healthful muscular fatigue induces relaxation and it has been proved that the better you can relax, the deeper you can sleep. It may be that you are sticking too close to your work and need more fresh air, more exercise outdoors—more physical recreation and less mental stimulation! We have to earn a living and we can't be outdoors much during the day, but a leisurely walk after dinner, staying out of doors for an hour or more, is conducive to better sleep. Office workers should try to spend as much time as possible out of doors during weekends.

If you have trouble sleeping, calisthenics just before retiring are probably too stimulating—but a good workout during the day would help immeasurably in combatting nervous tensions.

From all the research on sleep, it appears to be definitely established that sleep comes more easily when you have had a moderate amount of exercise, are not overly tired, have enough food in your stomach but not too much, and think about nothing!

FRENCH A SOCIAL ASSET AND SIMPLE TO LEARN

Teach Yourself At Home

Poor Anne! She's so confused by French words on the menu, in conversation!

Embarrassing to John when she orders veal saute, calls it "veal sawt." In talk of current events she refers to the Maginot Line as the Magi-nott.

Yet Anne could teach herself French. Pronunciation is simple when you know the rules—and you quickly acquire a vocabulary.

Here's a key to pronouncing words with the E accented as in saute. Give such an E the sound of A in "baby." Saute, meaning lightly fried, is pronounced saw-tay. Canape, a small open sandwich, is can-a-pay. And, of course, fiance is fee-ah-say.

Another simple rule: When words end in a consonant other than c, f, l, r, the consonant usually is not pronounced. Maginot is Ma-zhi-no. A coup d'etat, or sudden stroke of statesmanship, is coo day-ta.

And fun to begin your vocabulary with phrases you meet everyday. A cliche is a trite expression, a bon mot a witty remark.

You can quickly learn to speak French, pronounce correctly from our 32-page booklet. Gives simple rules of pronunciation and grammar; conversational French for shopping, restaurants, travel.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of Teach Yourself To Speak French to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Just because babies take such measured amounts of food mothers are sure to become worried the moment they spurn these stated number of ounces.

Chronic appetitelessness has a meaning and it behooves the parent and the baby's doctor to find out what. But, ordinarily, in any baby's life there will be days when food will seem less than appealing and it is this type of appetitelessness about which one need not be unduly concerned.

LEAVING FOOD

Mrs. J. J. K. says that she has been feeding her baby according to the feeding leaflet supplied by health authorities. "Everything was fine up to a week ago. Now, she is leaving two and three ounces of her formula in each bottle and hasn't gained an ounce for a week.

"I have cut her cereal and vegetable feeding to one tablespoon each. This is her present schedule:

"7 a.m.—Bottle of 6½ ounces.

"9 a.m.—Fortified oil and one ounce of orange juice.

"11 a.m.—One tablespoon of cereal and 6½ ounce bottle.

"7 p.m.—Same as 11 a.m. Bottle at 11:30 if she wakens for it.

"Her formula is 27 ounces of boiled milk, 4 ounces of water and 3½ tablespoons of corn syrup. Friends tell me her formula is too strong."

Since the baby is old enough to take 7 to 8 ounces at a feeding it might be wise to add enough boiled water to make the formula 40 ounces in all, until such time as you drop the night feeding. Then it need only measure 32 ounces. This extra water will be good for the baby.

It is possible the milk may be too rich in cream. While the appetite is poor, skim some or all of the cream before measuring the 27 ounces. Add it back a little at a time when the appetite improves.

APPETITE NOT SAME

But the possibility is great that no matter what you do, when the baby is over this temporary indisposition, the appetite will come back with a flourish and she will be draining her bottle again. One must expect with babies, as with adults, that the appetite will not be the same day in and day out.

Our leaflet on "Poor Appetites" suggest some of the reasons for chronic appetitelessness. You may have the leaflet by sending in your request with a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Mrs Eldred of the Your Baby and Mine department in care of this newspaper.

Myrtle Meyer Eldred will answer your questions about diet, general care and management of children if you will send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your letter to Mrs. Eldred of the Your Baby and Mine department in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

Macaroni Dish Right For Warm Nights

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Try something different for dinner to surprise the lazy warm weather appetite. Sausage suzettes will certainly be different. And they will be good food at the same time. To make them, place pork sausage links in a frying pan, half covered with water and bring to boil. Boil five minutes. Pour off water and fry over moderate heat. Turn frequently as they fry. Cook between 12 and 14 minutes. Wrap each sausage in a wheat cake. Secure with tooth pick. Serve with maple syrup. On the same menu have a bowl of mixed salad greens with some finely shredded cabbage added.

Here's a macaroni dish for warm nights. Saves kitchen work and can be a meal—a dish. Have a raw vegetable salad on the menu.

To make it, prepare macaroni and cheese according to your favorite recipe. Prepare six pork sausage links as given above. Place them in bottom of casserole. Then arrange macaroni and cheese on top. Bake macaroni until done.

Lamb on skewers always surprises the family into hefty appetites. It sounds more complicated than it really is. Serve with mashed potatoes and fresh peas, or brocon rice and stuffed egg plant.

LAMB EN BROCHETTE

One and one-half pounds one-half inch thick lamb steak (from the leg), ½ cup French dressing, 2 bay leaves, 1 sprig thyme, 12 mushroom caps, 3 tomatoes, cut in quarters.

Have meat cut in one-inch pieces. Place in bowl and cover with French dressing to which bay leaves and thyme have been added. Add one peeled clove garlic if desired. Let meat stand five hours or longer. Preheat broiler 5 to 10 minutes. Remove meat from dressing. Dip mushroom caps and quartered tomatoes in dressing. Arrange alternate pieces of lamb, mushrooms, and tomatoes on metal skewers. Place on broiler rack. Broil three inches from medium heat about 10 minutes, turning occasionally.

Tomorrow's Menu

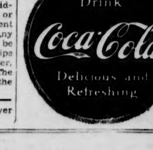

BREAKFAST: Grapefruit juice, pork sausage suzettes, maple syrup, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Cream of tomato soup, watercress sandwiches, gingerbread and whipped cream, tea, milk.

DINNER: Lamb en brochette, creamed new potatoes, green peas, sliced potatoes, green peas, sliced fresh pineapple, coconaut layer cake, coffee, milk.

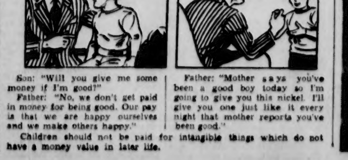

REJUVENATE WITH PAINT

If you are considering enameling or painting furniture this spring, it is important that the piece be absolutely clean and dry before adding the new coat. Dampness or dirt under the paint will prevent adherence of the fresh coating. Any old wax or furniture polish can be removed with turpentine. Wipe dry, rub off with fine sandpaper, then dust with a clean cloth. The furniture is then ready for the paint.

Points For Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

Son: "Will you give me some money if I'm good?"
Father: "No, we don't get paid in money for being good. Our pay is that we are happy ourselves and we make others happy."

Father: "Mother says you've been a good boy today so I'm going to give you this nickel. I'll give you one just like it every night that mother reports you've been good."

Children should not be paid for intangible things which do not have a money value in later life.

being given the opportunity of making this address to the graduating class of the present year.

"I have never stood before a graduating class in my life, and that is what is unique about today. My university interests and activities, such as they once were, have been on your side of the invisible line instead of upon mine. So, while feeling the dignity of my present position, I cannot help envying you the freedom of yours.

"There are more than 500 of you. It is a great mass of wisdom to be collected in one hall. I hope it will be used to its limit in the interests of our country, but I expect that you will not do any better with it than we have done with ours. The tinsel and the gloss are soon rubbed off and you will find that you have left, as we had left, the foundation facts of your education as guide posts along the way, and apparently little more.

USEFUL THINGS

"I have always understood that a convocation address was a profound utterance which sought to bring to the immature minds of youth something of the sage experience of the aged, but I suspect that we do not carry into these latter years nearly as much sagacity or wisdom as we would like the younger folk to believe. Rather is it true that the most useful things we have learned, and that we may pass on to others, are some of the simpler facts of life, which are equally accessible to young and old.

"It is my duty today to speak to you briefly of Freedom and, unfortunately for you, it is equally your duty to listen to me, no matter how bored you may become! There is, however, one little matter to which I would like to draw your attention, because it constitutes much of our understanding of anything we consider, and that is the meaning of words.

"There is no more delightful occupation to carry through life than the continued consideration of our language, of the meanings of the words it contains, the sequence of its sentences, the the beauty of its paragraphs and the dignity of the whole. I do not knows how the class before me would measure up with respect to the use of our language, but my impression is that its standard would not be and is not as high in that respect as the standard our institutions of learning enforced upon your predecessors.

"We are all apt these days to minimize the value of words; to be careless in our use of them; to confuse their meanings and thus to reduce the beauty of our language to a monotone. Language was not given us merely as the medium through which we communicate our ideas to one another. Its most important function is as an instrument of thought, not being merely the vehicle of thought, but giving it wings for flight.

CLEAR-CUT KNOWLEDGE

"All our ideas must be formulated in words and, even though our thoughts glide so quickly along a series of premises and reach their conclusions so rapidly as to leave in the memory no trace of the successive steps by which they get there, none the less that entire sequence of mental operations had been carried on through the agency of words. And thus we see the necessity for a clear-cut knowledge of what each word really means.

"There are very few words that are really interchangeable—very few that have in all respects the same meaning. This, for instance, is the case with the two words 'freedom' and 'liberty.' The learned analysts of our language have been unable to define with great clearness the difference between them, so much so that, on looking them up even in the Oxford dictionary, I find the primary definition of each of them to be almost exactly the same. And yet they are not the same, and we who are faced with the complexities of a changing and unstable world will do well today to recognize the distinctions between them. Only by doing so may we learn how to apply their meanings in our daily lives; to recognize the concrete values of liberty and the abstract obligations of freedom; and so to guide ourselves mentally and spiritually that we may appreciate the value of the one, and embrace with willingness the duties of the other.

"'No man,' said a great philosopher, 'is free who is not master of himself.' Or, putting it in another way, I quote a man named Horace who was always a great bother to me in my university days, and may have worried some of you. He said: 'Who then is free? The wise man who is lord over himself, whom neither poverty nor death nor bonds affright, who bravely defies his passions'.

"We all remember in our earlier days the difference between a transitive and intransitive verb. We remember the distinction between concrete and abstract. If we are to live lives of fullness of spirit, we must distinguish between the concrete relations of liberty to ourselves as it affects our obligations to others

"Perhaps I am growing a little too abstruse, or am complicating my own thought, but I would put it to you in this way. Today, in a sense, is your one free day of life. You, the graduating class of a University, have passed through the strain of study, the turmoil of examinations, and have achieved something definite which is represented by the parchments of this day.

NEW HIGHWAY

"The past is past. Its duties are past, it has reached a culmination now; but when you leave this hall and go out to seek paths or work and learning or whatever it may be that you have chosen for yourselves or what circumstances thrust upon you, you leave behind the summit that today you have reached, and enter upon a new highway whose end we do not know. And it is then that you will take on the burden of freedom.

"Pause today and cherish this occasion; pause and review how you have got here, and you will also have to pause and say to yourselves: what shall I do with that which I have achieved?

"Liberty—which is only a subordinate branch of my subject—we already possess within the law and, please God, we will retain it against any force that seeks to take it from us. Liberty to seek, to think our own thoughts, to uphold our own religious convictions, to establish our own homes and maintain them by our efforts; liberty to decide upon our own form of government; to retain the rights that past ages have built up for us; to cherish equality among men; to seek the progress of ourselves and the good of all without let or hindrance—that is liberty. It is a condition where extraneous forces may not compel us nor dictate our mental, spiritual or physical lives.

"And we will not forget, as Kipling told us, that

"All we have of freedom, all we use or know,
"This our fathers bought for us, long and long ago."

"Those ow you who have studied history—and I hope there are many of you—will readily trace the self-sacrifice, the struggles, sincere though sometimes misguided, the pangs of suffering that have gone into building for us today the structure in which we live, and which most of us take for granted. We may not disregard liberty as the very foundation of our personal lives, and if we are wise we will have a tendency throughout those lives to look with suspicion on any arbitrary force that seeks to regiment our existence or deprive us of that liberty within the law that our fathers attained and that we enjoy.

USE WITH CAUTION

"Freedom is a different word and another thing, and we must think of it and use it with caution. I found a definition of freedom in the dictionary, which was: Acting of one's own will or choice; not determined from without. I put it to you that there is no such thing in life. You today, at the apex of such freedom as life can afford, have no such freedom as that definition gives.

"Freedom, like nearly everything else in life, is only relative. Freedom to vote has not been a complete guarantor for the establishment of democracy. Freedom of education gives no assurance of deepened wisdom. Freedom is the most precious and the most hazardous of man's possessions. Without it he is less than man but with it he must rise above humanity's common capacities or be consumed by its weaknesses. Thomas Paine said: (Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it.) The progress of man is measured by his conquest over fear, and only through the highest freedom may he ever consolidate that conquest.

"You cannot act of your own will or choice. You cannot do anything that is not, in part at least, determined from without. You go home to your families after this convocation, and you are surrounded by the obligations of life, the duties that press upon you, the necessities that dictate your future paths. You will be free and the truth will make you free, but just as the third dictionary word that defines 'freedom' is the word 'license', so is freedom itself limited to the first two definitions and may not devolve into license; because when license comes in freedom goes out the window.

"Life itself is made up of service and the highest freedom and the highest liberty are found in service. Freedom is no more than the right and opportunity to choose our own form of servitude, instead of having it forced upon us by someone else. That is the great privilege that freedom gives to mankind.

"Perhaps this is my excuse for talking to you about words and their meanings. We have a right to liberty—we have no right to freedom except as an engine whereby we may do good in the world. Your minds may fly to the position of a slave who is given his freedom, and yet, if you will think again, you will realize that if he is a man doing his share in life, he but exchanges the servitude of slavery for the higher and greater servitude of citizenship.

"In the war now going on, just as in the last Great War, our people and others are fighting not for freedom but for liberty—the liberty which would be taken from us if we came under the rule of harsh and extraneous forces. But when we have won the war and achieved the security of our liberty, we will then take on the obligations of freedom. We will be forced by conscience to embrace the servitude which freedom will confer, and seek to restore to other peoples the liberty which so far we have maintained, and which through pressure of military might they have lost.

"The essence of freedom is within us; the obligations of freedom are all about us. So do not let us worship something that is only a part of ourselves and carries as its greatest glory and its greatest burden the servitude through which we make our lives useful to others as well as to ourselves.

"Too many of us are apt to worship our own freedom and to wear it as a yoke. Freedom is not, as careless definitions make it, a lack of restraint, the exercise of one's own volition. Freedom is greater than liberty because, while liberty is an achievement against oppression, freedom is our deep spiritual obligation.

TUNE SPIRITS

"I am not attempting to make you a sermon instead of a speech, but today at least we are free from the duties of our university years, and are still free from the chains of circumstance that lie ahead of us. It is perhaps not unwise that we should just at this time tune our spirits to the chord that will affect our future lives; set our souls in some measure to the music of the spheres; cherish liberty and all it means to us and those who will come after us, and love the freedom which is the deepest essence of the soul, and which will make of us all more useful men and women.

"You go from here and the future rests with you and others like you, not with us. The future of our own country will depend on you and others like you. Take with you as your guiding star the love of liberty and the determination to fight for it, as some of you will have to do before today is merged into a new future; and take with you in your inmost souls the love of freedom which belongs not only to you but to all men and women, and through which humanity may rise beyond its conditions today and attain nearer to the future which God intended for it.

"I cannot close this address without extending to you my very best wishes for the success and happiness of you all. Do not forget that, notwithstanding the pessimists, life contains far more joy than grief, far more happiness than unhappiness, if we will only seek it. May you have happy lives and, in the measure attainable to you, successful lives; and may you look back on your university years and on those who led you through them with pleasure in the memory of the days spent there."

New Spy Hunter

LAWRENCE M. C. SMTH, Washington lawyer, will head the Department of Justice's new Neutrality Laws Unit. Taking over work now handled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Smith will "maintain active contact" with State, War, Navy and Treasury Departments, handle all espionage, sabotage and other "foreign agent" complaints.

SEEDING NOW GENERAL FOR SOUTH AREAS

Mullen Visits Farms At Olds, Brooks; Says Stock In Good Shape

Seeding is general in all southern Alberta points visited during his visit there last week, according to Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture, who has returned to the city after visiting the provincial farms at Olds and Brooks. He was accompanied by J. R. Sweeney, deputy minister.

Mr. Mullen expressed his pleasure with the condition of the livestock and stated that the new stock purchased during 1939 had added "greatly to the quality of the livestock and will be a source of breeding stock for distribution throughout the province."

FINEST SEEN

At Olds, he said, the new piggery with the attached brooder house has proven successful in farrowing pigs without loss during the winter months.

Seeding at the Olds farm is about two weeks later than last year, he said.

At Brooks the horticultural station and provincial farm were inspected. Seeding is 10 days late on the farm and the fruit trees are just budding, he said. It is expected that the plum and apple trees will be in full bloom about the last week of the month.

This, he said, probably will mean that the danger of frost will be avoided. About 200 new varieties of fruit trees are being set out on the horticultural station and already a large number of organizations have made arrangements to visit the station during the summer months.

Cattle appeared to have come through the winter in splendid condition and southern pastures appeared to be in very good shape, he said.

Departments Of Government May Be Re-Organized

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, May 14—Persistent rumors are in circulation here to the effect that following the recent cabinet changes there will also be a redistribution of work as between the departments of trade and commerce and agriculture. It is suggested that the control and marketing of wheat, now a part of the duties of the trade and commerce department, will be transferred to the department of agriculture. This would include the control of elevators, the operations of the board of grain commissioners, as well as the supervision of marketing. Careful inquiry fails to show that a decision has been reached but undoubtedly such a change is being considered.

CHANGES TO BE MADE IN SCHOOL PLAN

Specifications To Be Re-Drawn Due To Rising Cost Of Materials

With lowest tenders exceeding the original estimates in all cases, due largely to rising structural material prices, property committee of the Edmonton Public School board Monday instructed the city architect to revise specifications for high school and elementary schools to be constructed here shortly.

The new buildings, to be erected in the West End, call for a high school, costing approximately $110,000 and an elementary school, estimated to cost $30,000.

Lowest total tendered for the high school was $123,128. This amount covers general, heating and plumbing and electrical installation. Three general, five plumbing and heating and six electrical tenders for the high school were examined.

For the elementary building tenders far exceeded the original estimates. Six general, seven plumbing and heating and eight electrical firms submitted tenders for this construction.

As it will require practically a week to revise the plans for these buildings, the committee postponed final recommendation of contract awards, which was to have been made to the meeting of the school board Tuesday night.

A letter from the Civic Employees Association, urging that contractors employ only bona fide residents of Edmonton in construction, was read. The committee decided to recommend that this request be adhered to when contracts are finally awarded.

EARLY CLOSING WON'T AFFECT FIRE CRACKERS

Rain or shine, riot, flood or war, nothing will be allowed to stop Edmontonians from celebrating May 24 in the good old-fashioned way—especially where fireworks are concerned.

In order that citizens may obtain all the noise-making, nerve-shattering, glitter-booms they require on or about May 24, the city council has added fireworks to the list of articles exempted from early-closing regulations.

Under the new order passed Monday night citizens will be able to purchase these celebration-tools when and where they please.

CITY GARRISON IS INSPECTED BY BRIG. FRASER

Brigadier M. Fraser of Montreal is a city visitor Tuesday to inspect the three artillery units now in the Garrison.

Lt. Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., Area Commandant, stated that Lt. Col. Fraser will inspect the batteries Tuesday and will leave here Tuesday night, presumably returning east.

The batteries—the 23rd Anti-Tank, the 91st Field and the 111th Field—are expected to form part of Canada's next overseas division.

Lt. Col. Brown announced that the University of Alberta officers training corps was leaving Wednesday night for camp at Sarcee, south of Calgary. About 250 are expected to attend. This camp is being held early so the trainees, Varsity students and graduates, can obtain training and then seek employment until their services are required.

In preparation for this camp Brig. C. E. Connolly, D.S.O., G.O.C., Military District No 13 with headquarters at Calgary, will be a visitor here Wednesday. He will be accompanied by Lt. Col. F. M. W. Harvey, V.C., M.C., commanding the Infantry Training Centre, Calgary, and Lt.-Col. Murray Greene, A.A. and Q.M.G. of M.D. No. 13.

Lt. Col. Brown also announced that the Edmonton Regiment (49th Battalion, C.E.F.) of the non-permanent active militia about 60 strong, would leave for Sarcee for training next Friday.

The 19th Alberta Dragoons will leave for camp on July 1 and the Edmonton Fusiliers will go on July 14, both units to Sarcee.

Military Orders

EDMONTON FUSILIERS (M.G.)

Battalion orders by Lieut. Col. H. S. Davies, E.D., for week ending May 18:

Parades: The unit will parade for headquarters training according to the syllabus of parades and training at the Victoria armories.

Machine Gun Practices: The ranges at Winterburn have been allotted to the Edmonton Fusiliers (M.G.) for June 1 and 2. All ranks are expected to attend this week-end parade.

Inspections: Headquarters inspection will be held on June 19.

Camp: The unit will attend camp at Sarcee for advanced training from July 14 to 23, inclusive, and not as otherwise reported. It is necessary for all ranks to complete headquarters training in order that this subsequent training in camp shall be understood and properly carried out.

Pamplets: Officers must read all pamphlets received by the unit in connection with training and operations.

Recruits: Recruits can be taken on during any evening from Monday to Friday, the main parade nights, Tuesdays and Fridays, being particularly suitable.—R. Wood, Capt. and Adjt.

CITY CENSUS FOR VOTE LIST TO START SOON

Annual census of Edmonton citizens and enumeration of city voters will begin almost immediately as a result of city council's action Monday night authorizing the work.

City Assessor Thomas Walker said it would cost more than $3,000, but it was necessary to prepare a list for each election. Only satisfactory method of preparing such a list was to send out the enumerators, he said. Attempts in the past to have voters register had proved dismal failures which resulted in hundreds of protests on election days, he said.

He assured council that every attempt would be made by the enumerators to see that only British subjects were included in the list.

GRANTS MADE BY CITY COUNCIL TO ORGANIZATIONS

City council Monday granted two requests for cash grants and tabled a third request pending investigation.

A grant of $250 was given the Mayfair Golf and Country Club for assistance in promoting the Canadian Amateur Golf Championships for 1940 which will be held on the club's Edmonton course. Aldermen decided the championships would bring a lot of business and publicity to the city.

They also noted that the club pays the city more than $2,600 annually for water used to keep the course in first class shape and Commissioner R. J. Gibb suggested they would use that much extra water to get the course in good shape for the competitions this summer.

Council granted a request by Mrs. C. M. King, that a grant of $150 be made to the Better Health Camp Council to aid in the task of supplying a short summer outing for under-privileged children.

A request by the Gyro Playgrounds committee that the city either take over the complete upkeep and maintainence of the grounds, buildings, fences and equipment on the playgrounds or increase the grant to $1,200 was deferred.

Aldermen decided that this question should be studied fully by the commissioners who will make a report at the next meeting of council.

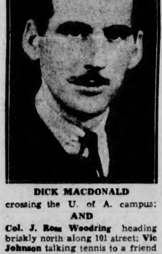

Celebration Held

Faculty and students of Concordia College celebrated their annual college day on Monday with many young people from northern Alberta parishes taking part. Rev. A. H. Maschmeyer, of Bruce, graduate of the college, conducted divine service in the college chapel during the forenoon. Program of sports was held in the afternoon. A three-act comedy "Breezy Money" was presented during the latter part of the afternoon and again in the evening.

Mayors' Parley

Ald. George Campbell and Mayor John W. Fry were named by city council at their meeting Monday night to represent this city at the mayors' conference to be held in Ottawa June 11, 12 and 13.

Total amount of loans made throughout the dominion for the period was $41,496,285 to 103,391 applicants.

BOBBY ROE, 3, AIR TRAVELLER OF NEW SCHOOL

Air travel holds no terrors for Bobby Roe, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Roe, of 10153 106 street. On Sunday the little fellow climbed aboard Yukon Southern's airliner Yukon Prince, northbound for Whitehorse, to ride as far as Grande Prairie where he will visit his grandmother, Mrs. E. B. McKinley.

Postal Inspector Harold Mitchell volunteered for the job of taking care of the youngster and in no time at all he was busy answering questions by the score. Dressed in a special "pilot's suit," the little fellow was really interested in the working of the big, silver plane.

Other passengers on the plane, piloted by Sheldon Luck, were Vernon Barford and Mrs. Elizabeth Haynes, bound for Berwyn and Fairview where they will adjudicate regional music festivals to be held this week.

FRENCH ARMY BUYS 50 HORSES CALGARY AREA

Purchase of 50 Alberta horses for the French government has been completed at Calgary, according to information reaching this city. Capt. Hubert de Montal, a member of the French government purchasing commission, who is in Calgary, stated that the French government preferred to purchase horses in Canada "because Canada is our ally."

The horses were of the light draft classification and were purchased in the Calgary and Cochrane districts.

Capt. de Montal is accompanied by Professor Etienne Letard, French government veterinarian and purchases were made through Marquis D'Albrizzi, Calgary dealer.

There is expectation that 250 horses will be purchased in Alberta at first and perhaps more later.

It is understood there will be purchases of horses at Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw and Calgary.

SPECIAL MEET WILL DISCUSS STORE CLOSING

Question regarding the advisability of permitting "corner stores" to remain open and do business regardless of city regulations forbidding the sale of certain merchandise after 6 p.m. week days, 1 p.m. Wednesdays and on Sundays is still unsettled, but city council decided at its meeting Monday night that something will have to be done about the situation soon.

A total of 343 letters have been received by the commissioners from various city merchants outlining their stand on the question. In order to thresh the matter out a special meeting of the bylaws committee has been called for 8 p.m. May 21, when delegations and representatives from all interested parties will be heard and discussed.

THE QUESTION

The Bulletin mails a dollar to Mrs. R. Kostachuk, of Myrnam, for submitting the question that is agitating many minds at this season of the year: "Is it up to the man or the woman to put in and look after the garden each year?"

THE ANSWERS

MRS. W. JANIS, Riverside Apts.; housewife: I think it nice for both the husband and wife to share in the planting and care of the garden. The husband, of course should dig, plant, hoe, water and do all other heavy work. The wife lends her moral support, a sort of agricultural cheer leader. Soft hands and gentle dispositions are impaired by heavy work.

W. RECTOR, 9622 105 street: The question tires me and I wish you hadn't asked it.

MRS. W. RECTOR, same address: Yes, I think it's a fine thing for a man to work in a garden. I'm glad you asked that question. My husband will present a striking picture in the garden.

I. R. MacKINTOSH, 11416 93 street: I think the garden is a great place for a woman. Yes, the fertility of the soil seems to be enhanced by the touch of a feminine hand. Last spring I planted some corn. I am still looking for the sprouts. I think I get the seeds upside down. Gardening is a fine thing for women.

THE BULLETIN'S INQUIRING REPORTER: If you sort of creep up on the job it doesn't become a major project—even for a man. For instance, I got up early this morning and planted my potatoes before they or my wife had their eyes open. Nothing to it.

City Council Legalites Take Turns Twitting

Absence from the city of Ald. Fred C. Casselman, M.P. for East Edmonton, who has left for Ottawa to attend the session of parliament, provided the basis for a lively, but friendly, exchange of wisecracks between Alderman A. Blair Paterson and J. H. Ogilvie at Monday night's meeting of council.

Ald. Casselman has been chairman of the aldermanic bylaws committee. Ald. Paterson referred to this fact, saying that he believed that someone should be appointed to act temporarily in Ald. Casselman's place. "We have a lot of work to do," he said.

"Numbers are no guarantee of intelligent action," suggested Ald. Ogilvie with a smile.

"I know. That's why we have to be so careful in choosing our men. I suggest Ald. Campbell for the job," retorted Ald. Paterson, amid laughter from the rest of the council.

But Ald. Campbell pleaded other duties and the appointment went to Ald. Sid Parsons, who suggested that perhaps the appointment might not be necessary. "The session might be short. It might only last two weeks," he said.

"Or one day. There is a precedent for such a thing, you know," replied Ald. Ogilvie, with evident pleasure.

Lynn Fairbairn, of Lethbridge, defeated Liberal candidate in the Lethbridge riding in the federal campaign, was a visitor in Edmonton Tuesday, guest at the Macdonald.

Field Comforts Fund Growing As Citizens Seek To Cheer Troops

As in the World War of 1914-1918, the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire organization has thrown its energies into the present conflict with the idea of rendering service to the troops.

Main activity at present is being directed to the Field Comforts fund, which is to provide tobacco, cigarettes, chocolate and other desirable comforts to the boys serving overseas with the C.A.S.F.

By special arrangement with the I.O.D.E. Canadian transportation companies have agreed to carry such comforts free. Also, they will go forward free of excise.

Therefore, if you have money to spend in sending these comforts to the boys, it will go further if spent through the I.O.D.E. Field Comforts fund, by reason of saving of carriage and excise.

The Bulletin has lent its columns to acknowledge donations to this fund. Send in your donation to The Bulletin and it will be acknowledged in these columns.

DANGER — ROMANCE AHEAD

By TOM HORNER

CAST OF CHARACTERS

MONNIE MILES, her mania for fast driving almost wrecked her romance.

LARRY COLLINS, newspaper reporter, hunting the murderers of his brother.

MIKE BENTLEY, wealthy rancher, knew too much about auto accidents.

Yesterday: Larry Collins, ace New York reporter, quits his job to return to Texas to track down the murderers of his brother, Hugh, killed in a peculiar accident. A member of the highway patrol, Hugh was killed while trailing narcotic smugglers. Driving along, Larry sees a man working on a disabled car, a woman and child beside him. When Larry stops to help, a second man takes Larry's car at gun point. The man drive away.

CHAPTER II

LARRY laughed bitterly as his car sped from sight.

"What a homecoming! I wanted to get back to Texas, and I sure did—right back to the old soil, on my own two feet—"

"What do we do now?" It was the woman with the baby. Larry had forgotten her.

"Guess we'll just sit and wait, unless I can make this car go," he told her, then asked: "How did you get mixed up with a couple of mugs like that? They're probably the two who robbed the bank this morning—"

Tears welled into the woman's eyes, and she clutched the baby closer to her. She was young, obviously terrified, and trying not to show it. The youngster sucked noisily on his thumb, as he tried to keep sleep-heavy eyes open.

"They are the bank robbers. I'm sure of it," the woman explained. "They came to the ranch about noon—we live near the line—they said they were lost and asked directions to the highway. Jim—that's my husband—was down on the far pasture fixing a mill. When they found out he wasn't around, they made me bring the baby and come with them. They told me they'd kill the baby if I didn't."

The woman nodded. "I wanted to yell," she continued, "but the one called Bill had my baby in his arms and he had told me if the patrolmen suspected anything was wrong, he'd shoot little Jim. I told the officers he was my husband and they let us pass. . . . But what"—her chin quivered—"what are we going to do now?"

"Right now, you and the baby are going to get into the car and try to take a nap, while I try to start this bus."

"But Jim—Jim will be worried."

"You'll be home in time to cook Jim's supper, safe and sound," Larry reassured her. "I'd rather those two had my car than have you and the little fellow in danger. Let's see now—wonder what these tires do?"

The woman laid the baby on the rear seat, came back to Larry. "I think we're out of gas. The gauge shows empty."

Larry sat down on the running board, rolled a cigarette. "That wrecks my career as a mechanic. Nothing to do now but wait."

Ten cigarets later, a highway patrol car stopped beside them. A wild-eyed, overall-clad rancher jumped from the car, rushed to the woman.

"Mary, darling! Are you all right—and little Jim?"

Larry walked to the officers, recognized them as the pair who had stopped him earlier in the day.

"Stopped to give a little help, and a couple of guys took my car . . . Probably the same pair you all were looking for."

One of the patrolmen nodded. "Yeah, they got through. This rancher found the car that was used in the bank job when he started looking for his wife. He called the sheriff and then rode a horse to the highway. We've been looking for the woman and the baby ever since."

The rancher left his wife and son, returned to the patrolmen. "Mary and the baby are all right," he said. "You want to ask Mary anything about those two?"

"No. Your wife's been through enough for one day," one officer answered. "Anyway we've got good descriptions of the men from the cashier of the bank, and the sheriff is checking their car for fingerprints. We've got a good idea who they are. . . . You better get your wife home, now. What's wrong with the car?"

"Just out of gas," Larry supplied. "We'll send a mechanic back with some from the first filling station. There's one up the way about 30 miles." He turned to Larry. "What are you going to do?"

"I'll ride on into town if it's all right."

Larry telephoned Colonel Harris, the highway patrol chief, as soon as he checked into a hotel.

"Glad you're here," Harris said. "I've been waiting for you. I'll be over to see you shortly. Better if you stay away from headquarters. Someone might see you and get to wondering too much about it. . . . Say—Randolph and Lee had your name on their report on that bank robbery. Too bad you lost your car. We'll try to find it."

Larry started to explain but Harris cut him off with "See you later," and hung up.

It was almost midnight when Colonel Harris knocked at his door.

"Found your car for you, Collins," the officer announced as Larry let him in. "Out by the airport, and in good shape, too.

"This bank job was pretty well planned. These two fly out until almost dark, then waited at the airport. A plane dropped down, landed in a far corner of the field, picked them up and was in the air again before the field officials could do anything about it. Didn't even get the number of the ship.

"Now about this other thing—" he unfolded a map, spread it on the desk — "here's where Hugh was found—wild, rough country, about 100 miles up the river. Some of it's flat, most of it's cut up by canyons. Not many ranches up there either.

"We believe that the gang of dope smugglers are flying narcotics in from the south, landing here. We know that most of the stuff that's going to Kansas City, Omaha and Denver is coming from this area. I sent Hugh up there to find out who was running the show. Someone with brains is in on it and we're going to get him. It's the big shot—the head of the outfit—that we want. We can pick up the others any time.

"Now here's what you better do. . . ."

Larry's car was in the hotel garage the following morning. Behind the wheel again, confidence returned, and the plans Colonel Harris had outlined seemed less terrifying and less dangerous. Larry was anxious to get to work at once, puzzled as to how to begin. He settled by deciding to look over the city, while he studied the chief's suggestion.

He drove through the downtown district, past stores whose window displays rivaled New York's best, out into the residential sections. He was semi-conscious of long avenues of arched trees, broad green lawns, luxurious homes and gardens, but he was more concerned with trying to discover some logical excuse for moving into the river ranch country. Then—

Crossing an intersection, Larry saw a speeding car bearing down upon him. He pulled hard to the right, swung into the curb. The other car whizzed past the corner, missed Larry by inches, skidded, and with tires screaming, turned into a filling station driveway, knocked over a tire rack and a water can before it stopped. Its bumper against the wall of the building.

Larry jumped from his car, ran across the street. "Are you hurt!" he shouted at the other driver.

A girl's face appeared over the door of the convertible coupe. A remarkably pretty face, Larry noted —raven black hair, flashing black eyes, a turned-up nose and a mouth that could have been a perfect Cupid's bow, if it could have remained still.

But the mouth was far from still. An angry voice was shouting back, "Idiot! Can't you read a stop sign? Driving onto a boulevard without stopping? Who do you think you are? Maybe you bought the street . . . Why don't you learn to drive . . . Get out of my way, I'm in a hurry!"

The motor raced. The car backed away from the building, slammed to a stop. The girl ignored Larry, shouted at the filling station attendant, "If you're damaged any—collect from him. It was his fault—letting fools like that one loose—to drive automobiles—" The car roared out of the driveway and was gone.

"It was my fault," Larry admitted to the station man. "What's the damage?"

"Nothing hurt here," the man laughed. "Boy, was Monnie mad. She sorta told you, mister."

"Everyone in town knows Monnie, Miles, mister. You must be a stranger. That's Monnie, all right—Monica Maria Christina Miles. Her old man's a rancher up on the river—old Col. Taylor Miles."

The name had a familiar sound. Miles. . . . Then he remembered. I was on the Miles ranch, Colonel Harris had said, that Hugh had had his accident.

"Oh, yes. Well, thanks, buddy. Looks like nothing was hurt."

He walked back to his car. "So that's Monnie Miles. Well, Miss Miles, it looks like you and I are going to meet again—soon!"

(To Be Continued)

Given Your Heart To A Dog To Tear - - - By Alec Waugh

AT the top of his morning's mail was an envelope in his sister's handwriting. He noted its presence there with irritation. Long experience had taught Hugh Osborne, that Phyllis never wrote unless she wanted something.

"I look on you as a kind of uncle, you're so much older," she would say.

Which he was; by sixteen years, and which had been well enough when the gap of half a generation had been set in the relationship of twenty-six and ten, and avuncular generosity had been tested by expeditions to the zoo, and supplications to intercede with parental discipline on such problems as concerned the frequency of theatre tickets. It was a very different situation now, when their respective ages were twenty-one and thirty-seven; and he was expected to act as an intermediary on such very much less clement issues as concerned latchkeys, allowances and unchaperoned acquaintance.

What on earth did she want now, he wondered.

"Hugh Darling, I'm going to be a nuisance—a ghastly nuisance," the letter started. "But I'm in trouble, real trouble and you're the one person who can help me. It's about John." John? Osborne paused, his memory searching the lengthy gallery of young men who had disturbed over the last four years his sister's peace of mind; John? no, he could not place him. He resumed his reading. "We're crazy about each other; really crazy," he read on. "We want to be married right away. At least John does; and I would, desperately; if only I could be certain it was fair to him. But I can't be, not quite, it's the money part. We've enough to live on, just. But it would mean desperately hard work, not spending one unnecessary farthing; no travel, no entertaining, nothing, and is that fair to John? I can't be sure it is. Because it is important for him. It really is, at this stage of his career, to get about, to see people. An architect after all—"

An architect, so that was who John was. Osborne recalled a tall, untidy youth, with one of those thin hard boned faces that often develop in later life a look of real distinction; an uncomfortable young man, who did not smoke, who kept fidgeting with his tie and pulling at his hair; yet had managed nevertheless to give Osborne the impression that one day he might amount to something. So that was who John was.

And it was in order that everything should be made easy for this John, that John might be able, in Hollywood parlance, "to go places and to do things" that Phyllis was proposing to her uncle-brother that her marriage, for the first few years, should be endowed to an annual extent of two hundred pounds.

No, no, really, he thought, this was the limit; this time she had gone too far. . . . .

Only one thing about the letter pleased him: Nowhere was the word "loan" mentioned. The Danegeld was demanded as a gift.

Your First Marriage Used To Frighten Me

From his wife's room next door came the tinkle of a breakfast tray. He pushed the letter into his pocket, examined his reflection in the glass, satisfied himself that the knot of his dark blue spitalfield silk tie was correctly centered in his stiff white collar, then tapped upon her door.

In his hand he carried a small sealed packet. At the sight of it she clapped her hands.

"If you aren't the most thoughtful husband."

"Did you imagine I'd forget?"

He had written on the card that accompanied the diamond clip, "On the anniversary of my happiest day, to thank you for my six happiest years."

"Darling," the eyes that looked up at him were tender.

"That is true, that really is?"

"Did you need reminding?"

She smiled, fondly.

"Six years, it's a long time, you know. That other time, that first time after all . . ."

"That was another kind of thing."

"Was it? I suppose it was. But you were in love, to begin with anyhow. That used to worry me so, once. If that first marriage of yours could be shipwrecked so completely within three years, what was there to stop . . ."

But he laid his hand across her mouth, stopping this flow of nonsense at its source. Voices on the stairs heralded the children's visit.

There were two of them, a boy and girl, five years old and three. It was with shouts and bounds that they had chased across the landing but outside the door they paused to recover breath, entering finally with the staid gait to which their weekly dance classes had accustomed them.

"I say do you know?" It was the girl's invariable prelude. She would stand her eyes very wide; an expression of the most solemn earnestness upon her face. "I say do you know when Putzi and Truddy tore the rug and Ada said . . ." you would imagine that she was about to announce the fall of the Guelph dynasty as she embarked on the trailing anacoluthon of an utterly pointless saga about their two dachshunds and the parlor maid.

Her brother at her side listened with the condescendingly approved attention of a schoolmaster who hears a favorable pupil recite a lesson; prompting with an occasional "No, when Putzi jumped up what Ada said . . ."

In Thirty Seconds It Was All Settled

It was a pantomime with which Osborne was familiar. Without detaching his attention, he picked up the pile of letters that lay by his wife's breakfast tray. Two of them were still unopened

"Here's one from Doreen. It feels like an invitation."

"Open it and see."

It was to a cocktail party for the Wednesday of the following Friday.

"Isn't that the day we're dining with the Marchants?"

"It's on our way. We could go there changed."

"If we accept, we ought to ask them to our box at Lord's."

"And they don't like the Williams'."

"That's what I was thinking."

"Why ask the Williams' then? We don't owe them anything."

"We could work them into something else sometime."

"Anything, any time."

In thirty seconds, in the interval of being good parents to two exactingly possessive infants, the problem had been settled. How easily they had arranged it too. How easily they arranged everything for that matter. Whereas once. . . .

He drew the dog's head upon his knee, drawing his hands slowly over the heavy head.

He smiled remembering how many discussions, how much acrimony would have been involved twelve years ago, in that other marriage before any solution to so simple a problem could have been reached and then unsatisfactorily with a feeling of grievance on one side if not on both. Suave mari magno. . . . He could afford to smile from this safe harbor.

Was there a single issue of domestic life, on which he and Molly had not contrived to quarrel? They had been so young. Twenty and twenty-four. How could one help quarreling at that age. One had not learned forbearance, patience, tolerance. How could one hope to make a success of marriage? Twenty and twenty-four.

And how old was this John of Phyllis'? Twenty-four, twenty-five? Only a few months older than he himself had been. It was absurd. Of course it was. Why on earth should he pay out money that he could ill afford so that Phyllis could make for herself the same ultimate atmosphere of friction that he had created for himself thirteen years ago. Why should he, why, in heaven's name?

Woolley Was Old: He Had To Die

"I'm sorry, very sorry, my dear Phyllis," his letter started.

The moment he had finished the dictation of his morning's mail, he set himself to his uncongenial task, with instructions that he was not to be disturbed for twenty minutes.

"You must know that no one is more anxious than I am to see you happy, but under the particular conditions . . ." he paused. The words came laboredly. He had progressed no further than the second paragraph when the sharp summons of the telephone shattered his concentration.

"Didn't I say I wasn't to be disturbed." He snapped.

"I know Sir, but it's Mrs. Burnham. I thought you would want to speak to her."

"Oh . . . well . . . yes . . . put her through . . ."

Embarrassed, confused, bewildered, he listened for the voice that once had so enchanted him, that later had so ripped his nerves

He waited anxiously. It was six years since he had heard her voice, since the announcement of her remarriage had lifted from his conscience the burden of a moral responsibility and from his scale of living the very fettering obligation of mounting alimony. At the news that she was on the line his spirits sank. Had this second marriage of hers, broken? Was she back on his hands again?

But no, it was not that.

"You mustn't think me silly. I'm sorry to be worrying you. I know how busy you are. But I thought you'd want to know. It's about old Woolley. He's getting old, 13, is old even for a poddle. He's very rheumatic. He must be in pain half the time. It isn't kind keeping him alive. The vet's coming round this morning. I thought you'd like to know. I wondered—you were so fond of him, perhaps you might want to say good-by to him."

She spoke in that quick, breathless, staccato fashion that had been one of her first attractions for him, that later had been one of the traits in her that had exasperated him the most. "Will you never come to the point?" he had thought as she had rushed sentence after sentence against the circumference of her subject. Even now after all these years, he felt his impatience rise as the short sentences rattled one upon the other.

"The vet won't be coming round till 12. I live quite close. University Mansions. Just off the Edgware Road. It wouldn't take you twenty minutes."

The sentences clattered on. But he was scarcely listening. Woolley, the absurb black ball, that they had bought on the afternoon of their engagement, that they had named after the Kent cricketer because that morning Woolley had made a century at Lord's. Woolley the squiggling puppy that had welcomed him on his return each evening from his office. Woolley the proud, handsome dog that had bounded ahead of their walks over the heath. He had not seen Woolley for seven years, he had pictured him still, as the proud high-stepping dog. Woolley old and rheumatic, at his tether's end. It was like the sudden opening of a porthole on a windy day. "I'll be round at once," he said.

A Poodle Will Never Forget First Master

University Mansions was designated in the postal records as W.1. A large red brick block of flats, it had been described as "the acme of modern comfort" when its gables of Edwardian gothic rose over the Praer Street reaches on the Edgeware Road. Before the war it had enjoyed a brief season of fashionable patronage, but now in an age of air-conditioning and central heat, it was clearly about to qualify for the status of a tenement.

Osborne had not seen Molly for seven years. What, he wondered, did she look like now. It was with a certain trepidation that he wondered that. Would the Molly of today bear to the Molly that he had married, the same relation, that this deteriorating block of flats bore to the trim Victorian cottage on the edge of the Heath beyond the Vale of Health where they had begun thirteen years ago the honeymoon of their first year of marriage? She had been little and dark and plump with ragamuffin ways. Had she grown blousy, fat, ill-kempt?

He was afraid of that, but he need not have been. In a long holland smock, with white cuffs and collar and small bow tie, she had on this hot June morning the unexpectedly dewey freshness of ripe blackberries in a country lane. As she took his hand, her scent, a blend of tuberose, that had once thrilled him so, and later he had condemned as "Oriental" struck upon his senses like a phrase of dance music.

"It is nice of you. I'm afraid he'll be a shock to you. He's got so fat. But he will be pleased. Woolley"—she called out, "Look who's come to see us. Twoodie."

The use of that old pet name, so familiar once, long buried now among the memories rarely recalled of that courtship period, would have struck vibrations from a chord nostalgic sentiment, had not another chord quivered more insistently.

At the name "Twoodie" a quiver had shaken the thick mass upon the carpet; a bark had come from it; a grotesque object struggled to its feet, shuffled across the carpet, a back leg trailing, trying to wriggle its hind quarters to wag its tail. The hair that fell over the eyes was gray and straggly; the centre of the back was bald.

There was no line of waist. Nothing remained of the dog that he remembered except a trick of lifting the upper lip over the teeth, in a kind of laugh. Nothing but that remained, the laugh and the quiver of recollection that had shaken the mass of flesh, at the sound of his old master's name.

"Woolley, my poor Woolley."

Therew as a pouffe beside the fireplace. Seated there he drew the dog's head upon his knees, drawing his hands slowly over the heavy head, unable to trust himself to speak, as Molly's voice rushed on.

"A dog never forgets, at least a poddle doesn't. He'd always go back to his first master: no matter how long after. You saw how he looked up when I said 'Twoodie.' Do you remember my telling you about my brother Robert and his dachshund?"

Woolley Was Happy When They Were Happy

She was started on an anecdote with which he was long familiar, breaking the story in midcurrent and beginning on another in the way that had so charmed him when he had thought of her inconsequent ramblings as "pretty chatter" and had so infuriated him later when he had labeled it 'silly gabble'!

"It's so strange to see him old. Do you remember that day at Hendon when we thought we'd lost him?"

It was in the first autumn of their marriage, in the days before snub-nosed Morris Cowleys had ruined Hendon as a picnic center. They had taken a bus from the war memorial at Golder's Green. It was before the tube had come out to Colindale, it was the Hamstead tube then, not the Edgeware Line. In those days the tops of busses were uncovered. They had sat in the front seat with Woolley lying over their feet like a hot water bottle.

She would stand with her eyes very wide, an expression of the most solemn earnestness upon her face.

They had picnicked in the shadow of a hedge long since cut down by speculative builders that had looked over the Welsh Harp. The sun had been warm upon their faces. He had dozed as her voice ran on from this anecdote to that: dozed till he had been roused by the cry, "Woolley. Where is he? I can't see him." Over twelve years ago, but would he ever forget the agonized anxiety of that long search, the shouting till his voice was hoarse: with Molly whimpering at his side, "If only we'd had his name upon the collar." Would he ever forget that, or the relief when at the very moment when they had started to abandon hope, Woolley had emerged wet and dusty, reeking of the filth in which he had rolled luxuriantly. "And I only bathed him yesterday," had been her plaint.

"He was so full of life too. Do you remember how he pestered us that day at Chagford?"

That too was a vivid memory. It was in the second year. The early part of it. They had gone to Devonshire, for the golfing holiday. They had breakfast in bed. It was wet and they had idled there, the gas fire lit, when suddenly with the unexpectedness that can make of a happy marriage a more spontaneous adventure than the most intense intrigue, they had found themselves in love. At that very moment Woolley had decided o na display of filial devotion, had jumped on the bed, danced on the pillows, snuggled his nose between their heads, trying to lick both their faces simultaneously. Would Osborne ever forget the noisy romp that had been their lovemaking; of how laughing and breathless she had said, "One really has to be in love to laugh like this."

"And do you remember how upset he got that day we quarreled about Janet's invitation?"

It hadn't been their first quarrel, not by many weeks. But one of their most typical. She had been away, visiting for a couple of days. There had been a letter addressed to her in Janet's script. It bore a penny stamp. The flap was turned over a post card. Clearly it was an invitation. To fix the date, to arrange his own diary, he had opened it.

"By the way," he had said on her return, "I accepted for a party of Janet's on Friday week." It had been the signal for one of their fiercest rows; as absurd as it had been symptomatic. "You open my letters, what do you mean by opening my letters?" That was how it had begun. "You knew it was an invitation? Yes, I daresay you did. But why should you accept it in my name? How did you know that I would want to go?"

That was how it had gone on. Finally, a point of recrimination had been reached, when their whole social life had become a corpse under the dissecting knife. "You're always complaining that I don't like people till I've got to know them. That's why you accepted that invitation on your own; to force me into a position where I couldn't possibly refuse." On and on the flood of recrimination streamed, and all the time the poodle realizing that they were quarreling had barked between them with an insistence that had forced them finally to abandon or rather postpone the issue; to declare armistice.

"He always knew when we were quarreling; as some dogs know when thunder's coming, he could only be happy when we were happy. Do you remember when we went for walks and there were four of us, and you and the other man walked on ahead, how he'd run backwards and forwards trying to join us up? Do you remember when . . . ?"

Stream Of Recollection Rushed On Jerkily

The stream of recollection rushed on jerkily. He knew now why she had rung him up. Not so that he should say goodbye to Woolley, but that she might relieve her grief by talking over the dog's life with the person who had shared its early half with her. For thirteen years this dog had been her friend; she was absorbed by sorrow. That was what his presence in this hour meant to Molly.

But for himself who had not seen Woolley for seven years, the hour had a different meaning.

For him the past had been suddenly recreated. With the heavy head pressed against his knee, with the tangled curls rough beneath his hand, there passed in a stream of pictures before his mind, those days of youth when they had loved and quarreled, when they had quarreled, because they were too young, because they were too in love, the carefree, improvident days when they had done madcap things, of those days of which Woolley so limp and helpless now, was the final symbol, days that were as distant for her as they were for him.

More distant probably. He lifted his eyes, looked around him. The room in which they sat was a sure index to what her life was now. It was a bright and cheerful room with light, gay, chintz curtains and chair covers; with Turner reproductions on the walls, with a large bowl of roses in the window. There was nothing expensive in her room. But it had a well cared for look.

He had fancied, remembering the ragamuffin she had been, that he would find in a dreary locality like University Mansions, a slovenly background suitable to some one who had gone to seed. He had not though. Just as she herself had stayed fresh and pretty so was her home neat and bright. She had made of her life in her different way very much the same kind of thing that he had made of his.

On a table against the window a child's books and drawing materials were stacked in a tidy pile; an exemplary child no doubt, who would appear at breakfast with clean hands and well brushed hair. The days were long past when doors had been locked on breakfast trays. On the mantelpiece were a couple of invitation cards. Molly was ready enough now for the mild amusement of an occasional cocktail party; the days when each invitation was the signal or disagreement were as much a thing of the past as this sick and tired poodle. Woolley, the last reminder, the last link with the old days.

Another Young Couple Entered Pet Shop

The sun was shining with promise of a long day's heat when he walked out into the noisy garishness of the Edgware Road. He had a heavy commitment of work ahead of him. He had hoped to get away from his office early, to watch an hour or so of the Essex match at Lord's. But he did not turn northward to the tube station. He turned westward down Praed St., taking the same side turning he had taken thirteen years before.

He paused; and something under his heart went round and over. Yes, there it stood, the same dark shop where, in a distant Summer, a bundle of black wool, squiggling against a window pane had laid its spell upon two young hearts. And there standing before the window the reincarnation of himself and Molly; young love personified; were two young people. Her hand lay upon his arm; upon her finger was an engagement ring. Her eyes were bright. Her voice was pleading. "Darling, he's a pet; we must, we really must." Her voice was glowing.

He smiled wryly as they pushed through the door into the shop What had Kipling written. "You've given you heart to a dog to tear." Did they realize as they pushed open the shop door that they were not only buying themselves a dog; they were buying pain for themselves, twelve or fourteen years from now, such pain as at this moment was tearing Molly's heart.

Did they realize that? Probably. But who at such moments looked ahead, figuring out the cost? They realized that, but did they realize that that knowledge was only half the truth? It was not only a dog that would be dying in fourteen years; something else would have died, many summers before that, the youth in their hearts, the capacity to do wild things, to quarrel over nothings. They might be together still, that couple.

When that puppy grown into old age lay for the last time between them; its head heavy upon their knees, they might be bound by a deep devotion, by mutual sympathy, by trust and confidence. The death of this dog that they were buying now might be a shared sorrow; one of those shared things that constitute the sum of marriage. It might; or it might not. That lay on the gods' knees. One thing alone was certain. Youth would have left their hearts. The day would be past, long past, when they locked doors on breakfast trays.

In his pocket was his sister's letter. That morning he had shrugged impatient shoulders. But at home he had been surrounded by his "family man," his "middle-aged" responsibilities. At his office desk he had started an admonitory letter. But at his office he had been surrounded by filing cabinets, typewriters, sales charts; the testimonies to a planned prosperity. In a home such as his, in an office such as his, it was by a standard of prudently planned future that one assessed importance. But here, standing in front of a dog shop window, with the picture of the past before his eyes, with the sound in his ears of a voice that glowed, it was less easy to be sure of what was and what was not important.

Was it really wisdom to plan the future, to figure out the cost? Was one deterred from the purchase of a dog by the knowledge that one was buying one's own sorrow ten or fifteen years ahead? Did the knowledge that love, or at least one side of love was transitory hold one back from love? Did youth's improvidence ask counsel of the cooled blood of middle-age?

He Was In No Mood To Figure Out The Cost

His office was in Holborn, but it was to the Charing Cross Tube Station that he booked a ticket. His bank was in Whitehall.

"My ledger, please," he said.

His account was substantially in the black. Three hours earlier prudence would have warned him to weigh the various dangers of the moment, the wavering nature of the world's markets in view of the world's unrest. But now in the light of memory the present was more insistent than the future—whatever the next years might hold there was that long black entry now.

What was it in the last analysis that his sister had really asked of him? What else but the chance to enjoy to its fullest, the reckless improvidence of youth. She had not known what she was asking for, But he, in his experience did. The chance to savor first love at its highest, in its fullest measure was his for giving.

How much was it that she had asked him for, two hundred? Yes, but one always underestimated one's expenses. Things always cost more than one expected.

He was in no mood to figure out the cost. He could manage three. Let her have those few years at their best and freshest, without worries, uncomplicated. He signed the banker's order. Whatever else in life came twice, that did not come. Whatever happened Phyllis would have unspoiled the memory of these next years. The gods themselves could not recall their gifts.

H. DE SAVOYE RETIRES FROM VARSITY POST

Member of the staff of the University of Alberta for the past 20 years, Henri de Savoye, assistant professor of French and member of the department of modern languages, retired at the close of the current academic year. Prior to his retirement he was feted by members of the University's French Club.

Professor de Savoye stated Monday he had no plans for the future, but that he would be remaining in Edmonton for some time.

Graduate of the Sorbonne in Paris, Prof. de Savoye was a private tutor in France before coming to Canada, to join the staff of the university. He was honored by the French government in 1931 when he was presented with a diploma as "officer de l'Instruction publique." He is a former president of the Cercel Jeanne d'Arc and editor of a French language magazine "L'Avenir."

He will be succeeded at the university by Edward Greene, recent graduate in modern languages.

Prof. de Savoye came to Edmonton in 1908. He later served on the western front with the French army during the first Great War. Returning from overseas, he was lecturer in French at Blair College, Blairstown, N.J., for one year, and came to the university in 1920.

EXPENDITURES BY RED CROSS ARE REPORTED

Statement On $5,000,000 Fund Shows Small Administration Cost

Less than five per cent of the $5,000,000 received as a result of the Canadian Red Cross Society's last campaign for war and home service fund is being expended on administration work according to a report received by the Edmonton office Monday from national headquarters in Toronto.

Figures provided by the Toronto office show that 3.5 per cent of the funds is being used for wartime and peacetime administration work, and two per cent is being expended in connection with the campaign itself. The peacetime program of the Society which is being continued during the war period accounts for 14.5 per cent of the funds.

War work by the branches throughout Canada, including the provision of supplies and comfort will take 36 per cent of the funds, and the balance of 44 per cent will be expended in connection with war work undertaken by the national council.

$2,200,000 ALLOTMENT

Of the national council allotment of $2,200,000, $750,000 takes care of the erection and equipment of the Canadian Red Cross Society's base hospital at Taplow, Eng., the establishment and operation for one year of the Maple Leaf Club in London, and the underwriting of the Beaver Club, London. A grant of $100,000 was authorized for the British Red Cross and a similar amount was set aside for the furnishing of comforts and relief to the men of the Royal Navy, auxiliary services and the merchant marine. A sum of $50,000 was also made available for the provision of similar comforts to naval units and mercantile marine at Halifax.

Relief grants to the Allies, earmarked for Finnish and Polish Red Cross, amount to $100,000. Ten fully-equipped ambulances, manned by the British Red Cross, were shipped to Finland in January at a cost of $16,000. Funds and merchandise for the Poles were handled through the American Red Cross and an ambulance unit costing $15,000 was provided for the Polish Legion now attached to the French army.

Designated as co-operative services, St. John Ambulance Association was allotted $25,000, Canadian Legion War Services $40,000 and the Halifax Hostel $25,000.

Twenty per cent of the National Council allotment, amounting to $1,000,000, has been ear-marked for further projects, until another campaign is required.

SMALL AMOUNT

The small amount used for administration costs for peacetime and war work includes all expenses of branches, divisions and national and overseas offices, salaries, warehouse, packing, shipping and overseas freight, division and national workroom equipment, the "Despatch," official organ of the Society, and miscellaneous expenditures in conducting such a large enterprise, it was reported.

Seeding Again In Full Swing Following Rain

Seeding operations in the Edmonton district were again given a setback Monday as .05 inches of rain fell late in the afternoon. Some farmers were working on the land Tuesday and the majority of farmers in the district expected to have operations going at full strength by Wednesday provided the weather lived up to the forecast of fair and moderately warm.

The mercury reached a high of 62 above Monday afternoon, while the low mark for the day, 37 above, was registered early Monday morning. Low mark overnight was 41 above from 1:30 a.m. to 5:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The sky was comparatively clear of clouds over the city Tuesday morning, although light clouds were visible around the horizon. Majority of points in the near north reported cloudy or overcast skies, although no rain was reported. A light film of smoke was noticeable on the horizon from Edmonton, while Pelican also reported smoke.

The pageant will be held on the site of old Fort Edmonton on May 24, and will be one of the great attractions of the annual conference of the Alberta conference of the United Church.

The pageant will represent conditions as they were in the Edmonton of a century ago when Rev. Robert Rundle arrived from England to do missionary work among the Indians.

Under the direction of W. J. Hendra, a massed choir recruited from city churches is practicing for the occasion.

ESKIMOS QUIT CONFERENCE FOOTBALL

SPORTS BULLETIN

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

Reasons Why Fine Record Possibilities

THERE will be considerable disappointment around town today with the announcement that the Edmonton Eskimos will not operate this season, but I have a hunch that it will be out-weighed by a general feeling of relief.

Big time football in the Western Conference is a terrific burden for the public spirited group of men who have to work the year around to keep it going. In addition there seems a wide-spread feeling among the rank and file of fans that various war causes and the problem of clothing and feeding themselves will take all the money they can scrape up for some time to come.

There is also a feeling that scratching up money to pay for the football services of American imports isn't just the thing to do under present circumstances.

It is just possible that superhuman efforts by the Boosters and perfect weather conditions for all games might have pulled the Eskimos through the coming season of conference play, but the struggle would have been enough to send every executive member to the nut house. It doesn't strike me that half a dozen games here are worth all that worry and effort.

Executive Did Fine Job

IT WAS a fine piece of work that the Sport Boosters have done during the past two years in organizing and fielding the Eskimos—starting right from scratch. No one outside of the club has any idea of the terrific amount of work that has been done by a handful of executives to keep Edmonton in the Western Conference. True enough they have not been able to operate without deficits, but compared to the deficits incurred by other conference teams the Eskimos' losses have been trivial.

The past season left the Boosters slightly under $1,300 in the red, but Winnipeg, dominion champions, went in the hole $7,000 while the Calgary and Regina losses on operation were reported to be around $6,000 each. Furthermore, if two major games hadn't been rained on here the Esks would have finished with a profit for 1939.

But even in the face of adverse conditions that now threaten to become even worse, it is possible that the Booster Club might have gone ahead with conference play again if it had been possible to get enough able men willing to shoulder part of the burden that has been carried by a handful of enthusiasts. However a combing of the city failed to uncover these badly needed reinforcements.

Local Talent To Get Attention

FORTUNATELY the Sport Booster Club will continue in existence even if it does not field a conference team. A survey is now being made by Clarence Campbell to find out just what the Boosters might be able to do to keep football alive in Edmonton and develop local talent. While the exact program has not been determined, it is certain that something will be done.

Right now it seems that a three-team city junior league is the best bet. The Boosters have something like $2,800 worth of equipment on hand—enough to outfit two junior squads at least. Clarke Stadium is the west's finest football park with floodlights for night games. It would be a sad state of affairs if all this excellent and expensive equipment were allowed to go idle this fall.

Just what clubs could be lined up for a city junior circuit has yet to be found out. Personally I think that it should include a couple senior high school squads, and one or two other outfits that would use junior age players who are not attending high schools or whose schools cannot enter a team.

The Edmonton Athletic Club is sounding out the situation and may sponsor a team. The Scona high team, one of the finest in the west, might also become an entry. Vic High should also be able to field a team with the Boosters helping equip it and provide coaching. Eastwood is another possibility, while the Catholic schools and colleges might be able to round up enough talent for one team. Over at Varsity, Coach Bob Fritz could undoubtedly field a light secondary team for such a league, although the late opening of the U. of A. presents a problem that might be overcome in drawing up the schedule.

With three or four teams, games played at Clarke Stadium at least once a week under the floodlights, the School Band in attendance, school cheering sections and low admission prices, a city league should go over big. There seems every reason to believe that it would pay its own way and enough more to provide the clubs and schools with their own equipment after the first year. It would also develop talent that would be ready to move up to the Western Conference when the war is over.

Junior football in Winnipeg has met with phenomenal success—so much in fact that the Bombers figure they will not need to import U.S. players from now on. High school football is also successful in Calgary—in fact everywhere that it is properly organized and given a fair chance.

If such a proposed set-up interests you, the Boosters would like to know about it and any ideas you may have on the subject.

Brooklyn's Dodgers Proving No Spring Daisy: Flatbush Figures Durocher's Boys Good For Flag

Hopes Are High For World Championship In Yankee Stadium; Dodgers Have Balance, Urge To Win.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

NEW YORK, May 14.—Brooklyn fans hope the Yankees don't flop.

They want to see the Dodgers tear 'em apart in October.

The Brooklyn club's offices already are being swamped with requests for world series reservations.

Not a few Flatbush filberts suggest that if New York repeats in the American League, all world series games be played at Yankee Stadium.

Ebbets Field wouldn't be half big enough, and it isn't much trouble to run up to the Bronx.

YANKEE LEAGUE NOW

Delirious Dodger addicts have written Bill Terry, informing the Giants' manager that Brooklyn is no longer in the National League. It's in the Yankee League.

Every day the erstwhile Flatbush Fumblers play is like a world series day in Brooklyn. Radios blare. Crowds gather before scoreboards.

The Dodgers having served notice by topping off a record-tying nine-game winning streak with a no-hit, no-run performance by Tex Carleton, what chance have they got to go through?

A very good chance, is the answer, and the opinion is not limited to the Brooklyn party.

Rehabilitated right-handers form the backbone of the Flatbush hurling corps—Luke Hamlin, Whitlow Wyatt and Hugh Casey. Another, Carleton, looks better than ever with his crossfire pitches practically coming by way of third base. Still another, fat Fred Fitzsimmons, launched the campaign with a shutout.

Brooklyn has plenty of pitchers for what the many double-headers will turn into an endurance contest. Eager to break in are Van Lingle Mungo, Tot Pressnell, Newt Kimball, Wesley Ferrell and the left-handers, Vito Tamulis and Max Macon.

Big Babe Phelps, the hardest hitter on the club, and cagy Gus Mancuso have been turned into bench warmers by an intelligent young catcher, Herman Franks.

Brooklyn has the slickest infield the National League has boasted in years in Dolph Camilli, Pete Coscarart, Pee Wee Reese and Cookie Lavagetto.

STRENGTH IN LIPPY

This infield would be strengthened by the presence of Leo Durocher at shortstop, and Johnny Hudson wouldn't decrease its efficiency at either second, shortstop or third.

Ernie Koy led the club in hitting the last two years. Jimmy Ripple's bat was instrumental in six and four-game winning streaks which helped the Dodgers finish third . . . ahead of the Cubs . . . last fall. Charley Gilbert, up from Nashville, appeared to be a find.

Yet three former American League outfielders, Joe Vosmik, Dixie Walker and Roy Cullenbine, have kept Koy, Ripple, Gilbert and Gene Moore in the dugout.

LARRY NO KIDNAPPER

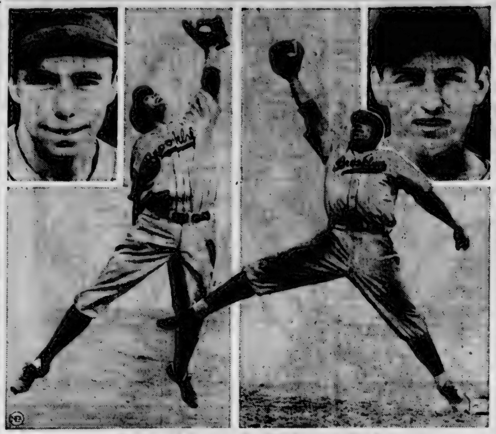

When it was suggested to Leland Stanford MacPhail, who once tried to kidnap the kaiser, that he take advantage of the opportunity offered by the Pittsburgh millionaires who would give a cool million for the person of Adolf Hitler, the red-headed head of the Brooklyn club cracked:

"Sorry, but I have a better proposition with the Dodgers right now. They're going to kidnap the pennant."

Brooklyn, inspired by Lippy Leo Durocher, named the outstanding manager of 1939, has the necessary balance, urge and the required concentration.

The Dodgers are shooting for it all.

Clubs with considerably less have come down in front in the National League.

National League's Slickest Infield

Boosters Will Back Home Talent Loop

EDMONTON ESKIMOS will not operate this season. At the annual meeting of the Sport Booster Club in the Macdonald last night, it was unanimously decided that in view of war conditions and the need of heavy importation of players that the Edmonton club would not field a team in the Western Conference during 1940 but would retain its franchise.

The Sport Booster Club however will continue in existence and foster local football this season—in all probability a league made up of junior and senior high school clubs.

The decision to drop out of conference competition for the coming season was reached after Secretary Ken Montgomery had presented a report on recent meetings of the league executive and a number of members had expressed the view that war conditions would make the financing of a team here very difficult.

Shelving the Eskimos for the time being was in no way a result of the Western Conference breaking with the Canadian Rugby Union over playing rules.

The financial report presented by Treasurer Jack Marshall showed that the Edmonton club was the most successful in the conference last season with a deficit of slightly less than $1,300. Plans for wiping this out as quickly as possible were discussed and handed on as recommendations to the incoming executive.

New officers will be named and plans formulated for local football at a meeting to be held this Friday in the Macdonald hotel. President Nick MacPhee, who has filled this important post since the formation of the club, definitely declared that he was retiring from that post.

Regina Plans To Carry On

REGINA, May 14.—Regina rugby boosters decided last night the famed Roughriders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union will continue their gridiron career for at least one more year.

Once again the 'Rider troubles were aired and rugby boosters peered into the future. They admitted it was none too rosy, but the optimists had their way and pushed home the vote to continue.

"If we fold up now, we fold up for at least five years," warned one executive.

Jack Lockhart reported on the membership drive and indicated that at least 100 men had joined the boosters at $10 apiece. "We can easily get that many more if we work, in fact, we can triple the figure," he said. The campaign will continue for another two weeks when the new executive will elect the season's officers.

Reporting on the budget, Lockhart revealed that the 'Riders plan a team costing $15,500 which is almost $5,000 below last year's figure but not far from the figures of previous seasons. The 1939 club, which operated at a deficit of $5,000, was the most costly of all Roughrider squads.

N. J. (Piffles) Taylor had been elected acting chairman until the new executive takes office and three trustees were named to handle the membership drive.

Calgary Bronks Definitely In

CALGARY, May 14.—When informed that Edmonton Eskimos had decided not to operate during the 1940 grid season, Alf Williams, president of the Calgary Rugby Football Club, remarked "too bad, I had heard that Eskimos were doubtful starters in the Western Conference next fall but was in hopes that the officials might reconsider their decision and carry on. Probably they will still be able to see their way clear to field a team. At least that is my hope for this is no time to let down on sport activities."

As regards to Calgary Bronks continuing in the Western Football Conference, President Williams said: "We are definitely planning on sponsoring a team next fall. And from present indications we will have just as strong if not a stronger squad than last year."

Mr. Williams was delighted to learn that Regina would remain in the Western Conference. "Regina has always been football minded and I had no doubts at any time that they wouldn't function."

Dick Haughian, coach of the Calgary Bronks, was pleased to learn that Roughriders would be again seeking western senior grid honors in the fall and disappointed to learn that Eskimos would not be operating.

Haughian said if the Bronks carried on coaching would not conflict with his new duties as city playgrounds supervisor, he expected to be tutoring the "Red Raiders" again.

"Bronks have the makings of an exceptionally strong and well balanced squad. Hoptowit, Cosgrove, Hughes and Hal Harrison together with all of last year's stars with the possible exception of Bisbing, Warren and Hughes, will be available. And we also expect to have Joe Turner, too."

Haughian stated he would not know definitely about his football coaching until the Bronks' membership drive was completed the end of the month.

CANADA'S BALL GETS BOOST BY SEMI-PROS

NEW WATERFORD, N.S., May 14.—The Canadian semi-pro baseball movement serves a very definite place in baseball, Laurence J. Doucet, Canadian semi-pro baseball commissioner, affiliated with the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress, explained in a recent meeting of baseball enthusiasts here.

Doucet will supervise the first Canadian championship semi-pro tournament at New Waterford in July.

"If competition is the life of business, if competition is so essential to the popularity and calibre development of any game, does it not follow that competition in the sponsorship of baseball is also beneficial, and not criminal—as some champions of amateur baseball would have one believe?" Doucet asked. "The sponsorship of baseball is a business."

In Canada, at the present time, there are some sixteen teams under the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues comprising two leagues, headed by the two International League teams, Montreal and Toronto. Under the A.A.U. of C., baseball is being played in but three of the nine Canadian provinces on an organized and well directed basis. There are, however many fine independent teams and leagues in existence.

The work being done by these organizations is good, but realizing its unprecedented success in the United States and the extra aggressiveness which competition would bring in the sponsorship of baseball in Canada and particularly the development of our own youth the Congress decided to build up baseball interest in Canada.

It is not the desire nor intention to kill or injure baseball as organized at present, but rather to share in the good work and introduce a fair competitive spirit thus making all more aggressive. The Congress aims to organize and establish baseball on a real nation-wide basis by featuring baseball alone and thus touching sections of our country where previously absolutely nothing was being done for this sport.

Complete details of the Canadian semi-pro program may be obtained by writing Laurence Doucet, Box 464, New Waterford, N.S.

Weight Lifting Records Claimed

VANCOUVER, May 14.—Two new Canadian marks were claimed by Vancouverites at the western Canada weightlifting championships here over the week-end.

Bill Young in the 132 pound class exceeded by three pounds his own dominion two-hand "snatch" mark of 174½ pounds and Russ Lewendon in the light-heavyweight class beat by four pounds the 220 pound Canadian "snatch" record established by Gerard Michaud of Quebec.

KING'S PLATE CLASSIC PEPS EAST TRACK

TORONTO, May 14—Racing fever gained momentum as balmy breezes turned thoughts of turf followers to the King's Plate, turf classic which officially opens the Canadian racing season Saturday.

Workouts, favorites, conditions, probable odds and all the whys and wherefores connected with the mile and a furlong race at Woodbine Park cropped into general conversation. To the fore were the names of Dark Comet, Hood, Katie Bud and Frobisher.

They did not maintain all the support in a field that lacks a clear-cut favorite. H. C. Hatch's Curwen and J. E. Frowde Seagram's Silvos drew searching scrutiny when they trotted on the turf for conditioning trials.

Hatch's colors have been carried to victory twice in the long gallop for the King's 50 guineas and the major portion of a $7,500 added purse. Nonsweep won in 1936 and Goldlure repeated for the stable in 1937.

B.C. Sending 12 Mittmen To Finals At Cardston

VANCOUVER, May 14.—Speed and experience are combined in the team of 12 British Columbia fighters who have signified their intention of competing in the dominion amateur boxing championships at Cardston, Alta., May 23, 24 and 25.

The squad will be headed by Henry Devine, the Vancouver Grandview Athletic Club belter who will be defending the dominion featherweight title he won last year at Montreal. Three other fighters, two from Creston, may make the trip in addition to the 12, who were chosen on the basis of their performances in the British Columbia championships here last March.

Here's the squad according to the latest word from Harry Porter, chairman of the British Columbia boxing commission:

Paperweight—Gordon Calvert of Abbotsford. Gordon is in a special 80-pound class and merchants of his home town in the Fraser Valley are trying to raise money to send Gordon across the Rockies.

Flyweights — Tado Kato, 112-pound North Vancouver Olympic club flash and British Columbia champion. Fight experts report that Kato, who is in the senior division for the first time this year, should prove a surprise in the dominion championships.

MAY DROP DOWN

Jackie Turner who hails from Britannia Beach, is the British Columbia 118-pound champion. It is expected, however, that he will drop down to the 112-pound division and enter along with Kato. He fought in the Golden Gloves tournament in the United States last year.

Bantamweight — Mickey Rogan, North Vancouver Olympic club boxer, has been fighting at 126 pounds but hopes to drop down to the 118-pound class for the Cardston battles. He is regarded as a dark horse and might upset the dope.

Featherweights—Henry Devine, a determined fighter who won the provincial featherweight crown in addition to his dominion title, will be accompanied by Bud Walsh Walsh, who also tips the scales at 126 pounds and hails from the Columbia Club of Vancouver, won the Northwest Golden Gloves bantamweight crown in 1938.

Lightweights—In the lightweight division are Eddie Troll, the British Columbia champ from Britannia and Nino Barichello, a promising 135-pound battler who fights for the North Vancouver Olympic Club. Nino was runner-up in the provincial eliminations.

POPULAR FIGHTER

Welterweight — Gordon Woodhouse, welterweight champion of British Columbia for three straight year, is one of the province's most popular young fighters. He worked at Port Alberni last winter and performed in several shows there but has recently returned to Vancouver. He'll probably fight under the Grandview Athletic Club colors.

Middleweights — Norm Dawson, 160-pound British Columbia champion and Grandview Athletic Club star, may not be able to go east because of his job. Norm was champion in the 160-pound division in the British Empire games trials in 1938. If Dawson doesn't make the trip, his place will be taken by Ralph Clark of Vancouver, who was runner-up in the British Columbia matches.

Light-heavyweights—Allan Dunn of the North Vancouver Aries Club is the favorite in this class. He is two-time winner of the provincial light-heavy crown, a former Northwest Golden Gloves title-holder and a finalist in the Vancouver Sun's Golden Glove tourney here last winter. Syd Argyle of Creston may enter along with Dunn at 175 pounds.

Heavyweight—Jack Patterson, a Victoria boxer who will enter with the Grandview club boys, is regarded by many here as the coming Canadian champ. He fought while attending college at the University of Idaho and won the British Columbia crown here in March.

CITY COUNCIL PUTS HEAT ON BRONK COACH

CALGARY, May 14.—Richard Haughian, coach of the Calgary Bronks rugby team, will be unable to attend to his coaching duties if they interfere with his work as civic playgrounds supervisor. This was made clear by city council at the regular meeting Monday.

Haughian commenced work as playgrounds supervisor for a six months probationary period on May 1. It was stated at council meeting his duties would keep him occupied "until 8 o'clock at least each evening."

City Commissioner, J. A. Tweddle, said Haughian informed W. R. Reader, parks superindent he would not be coaching the team if appointed playgrounds supervisor. I'll see to it he sticks to his promise if it interferes with his work," said the commissioner.

ALL FRISCH'S CHANGES FAIL TO HELP BUCS

PITTSBURGH, May 14—Nothing works for Frankie Frisch and his last-place Pirates.

Fordham Frankie has tried almost everything excepting hiring a magician to find a winning combination for his National Baseball League club. Of 18 games the Pirates have won five.

Most of the trades have flopped, or nearly so—the crowning blow coming in failure of the $150,000 battery — Pitcher John Gee and Catcher Ray Mueller. Cash paid for these two, plus the half-dozen players thrown in with the deals, reputedly adds up to that figure. Both are back in the minors now on option.

No Pirate team has worked any harder in Spring training than this 1940 entry in the National League race. Since the season started, Frisch has gone the limit in experimenting. In one game he used 24 men—a league record.

The recruits, except Gee—whose bad arm kept him out—have been given their chance. Of the lot Frank Gustine, second baseman, looks best to measure up to a regular job. In 11 games he has batted .372.

Frisch admits it seems useless to lose sleep over his current aggregation.

"No purpose can be served in criticism of these players," he said today. "I am convinced some of them cannot deliver but nobody can say they are not hustling."

Alexander Stays On Job For Year

NEW YORK, May 14.—Grover Cleveland Alexander, working as a sports commentator in a local nickelodeon, took the job last year with the understanding it was to last a week. But the former pitching star proved such a hit that he's still giving his daily talks.

GOLF TIPS FOR THE DAY

By Tommy Armour

WHY HURRY?

Many players seem to be in such a hurry to hit a bad shot and get it over with that they almost always get their wish.

Never be so anxious to start the downswing that you may fail to finish your backswing. Let your wrists get cocked back at the top of the backswing and let your hands pause momentarily and then with the club head under your full control start your downswing.

Cleveland Tribe Releases Hudlin

CLEVELAND, May 14.—Cleveland Indians of the American League gave Willis Hudlin, 34-year-old right-handed pitcher, his release. As a 10-year man, Hudlin could not be sent to the minors. He is free to join any other major league club. Hudlin joined the Indians in 1926.

Arrows Practice Renfrew Tonight

Laurel Harney's Arrows will be working again down at the Renfrew Park this evening with a practice called for 6:30 p.m. A full turnout is expected. Following a full day of labor on the diamond yesterday the park is expected to be in better condition for a stiff drill this evening.

48 TOURNAMENTS WILL BRING OUT NATION'S CHAMPS

WICHITA, Kansas, May 14.—Official state semi-pro baseball championships will be decided in 48 major tournaments sanctioned by the National Semi Pro Baseball Congress this year, according to President Ray Dumont.

"Any team that is not a member of organized professional baseball," Dumont added, " is eligible to participate in one of the state championship tournaments."

Each tournament is uniform in operation, with champion awarded George H. Sisler state championship trophy; leading teams sharing in prize money and all visiting entries receiving mileage allowance. Each state champion is certified to compete further in the program, in which the natural championship will be decided at Wichita, Kansas, Aug. 16 to 28, and the semi-pro world's championship later in Puerto Rico.

REDS, CARDINALS BATTLE TO 14-INNING DRAW

MIZE CLOUTS THREE HOMERS IN SLUGFEST

CINCINNATI, May 14—Starting late because no umpires had been assigned to the game, the Reds and the Cards battled to a 14-inning 8-8 tie Monday before darkness cut short a St. Louis hitting attack featuring three home runs by Johnny Mize and one by Joe Orengo.

Four Cardinal hurlers and five Cincinnati pitchers took part in the 27-hit Marathon which, delayed 20 minutes until Umpire Larry Goetz could be called from a day off at home, continued three hours and 53 minutes.

Mize clouted his first homer in the second and a two-run blow in the third off Johnny Vander Meer on the mound for the first time this year. He hit his third—and ninth of the season—off relief hurler Milt Shoffner in the 13th to give his mates a momentary advantage.

The Reds came right back in their half with a pinch-hit double and a single to tie the game in its final knot.

Young Johnny Hutchings relieved Vandy in the fourth after the double no-hit star fed another circuit smash to Orengo and a single to his opposing moundsman, starter Mort Cooper.

Durocher Leads Dodgers To Win

BROOKLYN, May 14—Effective relief pitching by Lefty Vito Tamulis and a batting exhibition led by Manager Leo Durocher with four hits brought Brooklyn Dodgers a 6-3 triumph over Philadelphia Phillies in the deciding contest of their three-game National League series.

The Dodgers took charge of the game in the last of the fifth with three runs on Durocher's double, a walk, Dixie Walker's single and Babe Phelps' triple.

Tamulis held the Phils scoreless for the last four frames and got credit for his first decision of the year.

Bikes Issued To Cornell Gridders

ITHACA, May 14.—For the second straight year, Coach Carl G. Snavely has issued bicycles to members of the Cornell University football squad, 55 in number.

Riding in automobiles from now until the end of the semester is banned.

Trainer Frank Kavanagh instituted the idea of the bikes, claiming the pedaling developed the boys' leg muscles.

CANADIENS BUY MERCER, ADAMS FROM VANCOUVER

MONTREAL, May 14.—Officials of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced purchase of Laurin Mercer and Jack Adams, of Vancouver Lions of the Pacific Coast Hockey League.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

The announcement said the deal was arranged by business manager Frank Patrick, a former business manager of the Lions.

The deal followed closely at the heels of the purchase by Canadiens of Murph Chamberlain, forward, from Toronto Maple Leafs.

Mercer is 28 and has been playing professional hockey for seven years.

Adams, who will be 29 next month, has been highly regarded in the west and is another all-round player. A centre man, Adams turned to pro hockey last season. Previously he had played in Calgary, his home town.

Sports . . . . Roundup

NEW YORK, May 14.—If George Preston Marshall was a baseball interested in a football team, he'd be a long way to get Zeke Bonura and Buck Newsom. Estimates each is worth 75,000 paid admissions . . . Broadway books still favor the Yanks, but at a much shorter price —4-5 instead of the 7-20 opening quotation.

AND SO IT GOES

Here's Shirley Temple retiring at 11 with three million potatoes and comrade Whitney Martin quipping, "I reckon I'll be able to retire at three million with 11 bucks."

Rue de Sockeruc: Mike Jacobs, who let an option on the Boston Garden go by the boards, has been getting balder and balder ever since Armstrong and Paul Junior netted $32,000 up there . . . Johnny Paychek is anxious to prove he isn't as bad as all that and wants to fight Red Burhman free gratis on the Louis-Godoy card . . . how about giving the guy another chance?

CALGARY, May 14.—Crews started work Monday on the Calgary municipal airport and on the Airdrie airport, 20 miles north of Calgary to fit them for use as service flying schools under the Empire Air Training scheme.

These two airports will be ready by September, according to D. C. MacMillan, assistant district engineer, department of transport for northern Alberta.

Collapse Of Jap Lines Is Claimed

HONG KONG, May 14.—Reported collapse of Japanese lines in central China in the Honan and Hupeh border areas was hailed by Chinese dispatches today as a major Japanese setback, one of the worst of the war. Japanese casualties were estimated by the Chinese at 20,000.

BANNER ELK, N.C., May 14—J. C. Buell doesn't smoke. But for 50 years he has had a monopoly in his line of business—carving pipes by hand from rhododendron wood.

SPARRING IN SPORT - -

BY JACK DEAKIN

THREE years ago a handful of 14 veterans who starred in the game, started to rebuild box lacrosse in Edmonton. These men started quietly with juniors and juveniles. They played on any convenient lot and at first the games had only an occasional spectator. In their second year enthusiasm increased and during the finals a goodly throng turned out. Going into their third year these men have located the juniors on one central lot. They have a good schedule for the juveniles and also boast of midget teams which will act as "feeder" teams for the higher ranks.

I cannot, unfortunately, name all of these men who have helped the "club" out. George Harris and Myles Palmer, along with Doctor MacBeth are among the big supporters of the West End teams. The Jesuit College has annually produced good sportsmen and have helped nobly in building lacrosse. Henry White and Charlie Field of the Maple Leaf Athletic Club, have also been lacrosse enthusiasts. The Maple Leaf Club, one of the finest athletic clubs in the city in aiding young sportsmen, has fielded teams annually in lacrosse league.

Wednesday night at Jesuit College the juveniles open up while the junior loop starts at the league's Central Park on Thursday evening. And lacrosse officials have found another fine sportsman in Dick Barnes who came through for lumber to erect bleachers and put the Central Rink lot in fine shape. And now we come through the layout is not as handsome as they would really like it to be, it means progress for the lacrosse players from their ordinary rink lots to a closed field with bleachers.

JUST BEFORE THIRTY—Notes from the wires, Cincinnati's front office had planned a big day for Crosley field. It was a field day for the ladies and some 9,370 women thronged the park. Manager Bill McKechnie had a message by trotting out Johnny (No-hitter) Vander Meer who made his pitching debut for the season. Everyone new about the game—all but President Ford Frick of the National League's New York front office. . . . Fifteen errors by teams lined up and were near ready for that familiar cry of "play ball" there were no umpires on hand by the league to do the shouting. . . . Imagine a ball game without an ump. . . . Indeed it was embarrassing and very exceptional. But they found a couple of holiday-jumps and had the game on. It was a 14-inning battle and ended 8-8 and a poorly organized game thus ended by the 1 o'clock curfew. . . . Local lingo—Marah Darling, victimized by one of those many rumors along the circuit, states he didn't receive an offer from the Flyers. . . . He states further the Flyers are not after any of the Olds Elks of last year . . . Bill Marsh isn't thinking of Laurel Harney whom the Flyers would like, but so far have failed to do much about. . . . A southern club would like Harney, too. . . . Well, maybe Harney will be right handy to talk to here come fall—and again, maybe he won't. . . . And Harney announced his front-run-ning candidates for the senior Arrows ball club. . . . There will be Cliff Kilburn and Johnny Gray catching. . . . Zeke Hefferman and Jack McGill are first basemen. . . . Gerd Robbins is slated for second base while Harry Forrest is the shortstop candidate. . . . Norm Fairhurst, who was thinking of quitting on account of his eyes, and James are third sackers while pitchers are Bud Foley, Ken McCauley, Lefty Balter, O'Donald and B. Lund. . . . Outfielders are Neil and Mac Colville, Dave Brockie, Fred Lund and Cliff Johnson. . . . Many more have worked out and have looked fairly impressive.

Grads Shall Not Pass

ELLEN FRIESEN, one of the steadiest players on the Wichita "Thatstons", who will be making her fourth trip to Edmonton with the Kansas champions. Never spectacular, she can be depended upon to play heads-up basketball all the time, and can be used at any position on the floor. The Wichita girls are already on their way to Edmonton, and will arrive here by motor sometime Friday. Along with the Grads, it is expected that the visitors will work out at the arena on Friday night. The two teams will get into action on Saturday, and will play a three-game series, with total points in the three games to decide the issue.

With The Pin Busters

Championship of the Junior Commercial Ladies' Five Pin League was won last night by the Balls squad winning two straight games from the C.D.L. crew, Irene McKay of the winners set the pace with games of 171 and 176.

This league will formally wind up the season with a banquet in the Cameo on Wednesday evening.

The title series of the City Mixed League was also run off last night with Macs winning two out of three games from the Canada Packers. "Mac" McBride was the top bowler with a high single of 251 and a triple of 625.

Attempted Suicide Charge Will Face Manitoba Farmer

WINNIPEG, May 14.—Royal Canadian Mounted Police yesterday revealed they had arrested William Hucall, young farmer of the Komarno district, 50 miles north of Winnipeg, on a charge of attempted suicide.

Hucall was arrested following his recovery in hospital at Teulon, Man., from poisoning. He was found in the barn on his farm April 29.

A week before, Fred Morocz, 63-year-old Komarno farmer, was discovered in his cabin killed by a shotgun charge through the back of the head.

Police said he was last seen alive by Hucall, who had discussed a cattle deal with him.

VATICAN ORGAN CONDEMNS NAZI TACTICS IN WAR

VATICAN CITY, May 14.—The Vatican newspaper, l'Osservatore Romano, last night charged Germany with waging a war of extermination against innocent civilians and dropping spies from the skies in contravention of all international law.

"No ultimatum and no declaration of war was presented to Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg," the newspaper said. "At dawn of May 10 open cities and civilian populations of these neutral countries were bombarded and hundreds of victims taken."

The Vatican newspaper accused Nazi parachutists of "wearing uniforms forbidden by The Hague convention," and justified the Allied order for the death penalty against Germans found in uniforms other than those of their own armed forces.

German Aircraft Told To Harass Lowland Refugees

LONDON, May 14.—The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a news broadcast yesterday said the British air ministry had announced receipt of a message intercepted between a German ground station and a German aircraft over the invaded Low Countries instructing fliers to harass refugees.

The message, as given out by the air ministry, said: "Note civilian refugees on the road. Harass these as much as possible."

AFRIKANDERS' ANGER RISING OVER INVASION

CAPE TOWN, May 14.—Growing anger over Germany's invasion of The Netherlands among South Africanders, whose forefathers came from Holland, was indicated last night when two of the most powerful members of the opposition Nationalist group telegraphed to Prime Minister Jan Smuts offering their full support and services to further his war policy.

Indications were that General Smuts, who rode into power last autumn with a clear, but small majority in the South African assembly, would have a much more substantial majority now.

The national assembly last night unanimously voted £100,000 (about $450,000) for the relief of suffering in Belgium and Holland.

Fahey Is Unfit To Stand Trial Is Jury Decision

Two physicians testified the accused, charged with slaying his mother and sister last Jan. 31 in their home here, was suffering from the last stages of dementia from which he never would recover.

$100.00 or $125.00 buys you a beautiful lot in Windsor Park, size 50x150'. One of the most attractive locations in the City of Edmonton. These prices are ridiculously low, about one-quarter of what they comparatively should be. They are selling fairly quickly.
Just imagine five 50x150' lots for $500.00 in such a close-in district, close to the University and close to one of the residential districts in the City.
There is a block of lots (15) which may be purchased for $1,500. This would make a fine garden or nursery site, right in the centre where the nursery products will be needed.

A group of Edmonton businessmen, who have had the plan under consideration for more than a year, requested Monday night that they be granted a long lease to the property for the erection of the building. BONNIE DOON FOLK SEEKING BUS SERVICE

Delegation Of 100 Residents Attends City Council Meeting

Largest delegation to in ade the city hall for years, more than 100 persons from the Bonnie Doon district attended Monday night's meeting of city council to ask for permanent bus service to their district.

At the present time, due to the re-decking of the bridge which carries Whyte avenue over the Mill creek ravine, street car service to the district has been discontinued, and the district is being served by a bus line up Connor's hill.

The spokesmen claimed that such a service would hasten development of the Bonnie Doon district, and, besides paying for its upkeep out of fares, would soon bring the city increased revenue from new properties and homes that would be erected.

Another delegation wanted the bus service to run up to 104 street on Whyte avenue. Council decided to refer the entire question back to the transportation committtee for consideration.

Bylaw Paves Way For Construction Norwood Theatre

Construction of a $40,000 "neighborhood" theatre in the Norwood district became a distinct possibility as a result of council's decision Monday night to pass a bylaw permitting the construction of theatres, seating 500 or less, of metal-lath and stucco where no other building is within 20 feet of the theatre.

Plans for the construction of the theatre have been completed for some time, but existing city regulations forbid the construction of a theatre of any material other than brick. Bylaw authorizing the change of present regulations to permit construction of the theatre was given first reading.

20-Mill Zone

Report that districts at present included in the 20-mill rate zone are not sufficiently developed to warrant their inclusion in the inner, or 51-mill rate zone, was received by city council from city assessor Thomas Walker Monday night. Mr. Walker suggested that the cost of extending utilities to outlying areas would far outweigh tax income from these districts even on a 51-mill basis.

Engineers' Head

E. NELSON, chief engineer of Northwestern Utilities, Ltd., was elected chairman of the Edmonton branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

McKenzie; Optimist Club, Joseph Lemmon; Rotary Club, J. F. Philp, A. McCulloch and Harvey Harrison.

John M. Imrie, first vice-chairman of the Edmonton Council of Social Agencies, presided at the meeting. Other representatives of the council attending were W. T. Henry, chairman, and Lillian Thomson, executive-director.

STUDY WAR WORK

The meeting adopted a resolution that a committee be appointed of two representatives each of the Red Cross Society, Knights of Columbus, Canadian Legion, Salvation Army, and Y. M. C. A., two delegates of the Council of Social Agencies, and Capt. McLaws to study the war service work being done in the city with a definite idea of coordination of effort.

Joel K. Smith moved that the committee study the possible unification of financial campaigns for war service aid, their recommendation to be brought before a future meeting of those attending the Monday session for an official vote.

CALGARY TECH. WILL BE USED FOR AIR PLAN

Taking over of the Alberta Institute of Technology by the Dominion government for use as a wireless training centre in connection with the Empire air training scheme was announced Tuesday. Classes at the technical school will be moved to the grandstand building at the Calgary exhibition grounds.

Negotiations for taking over the technical school were completed over the week-end at Calgary when Col. Goodwin Gibson, Dominion department of national defence real estate purchasing agent, visited the southern city.

Col. Gibson stated that both the provincial government and the Calgary city administration had given the utmost co-operation in making arrangements.

The transfer of classes to the exhibition grounds building will be made in time for opening of the new school year on October 1.

It is expected that about 1,500 wireless operators will be trained at the new school.

W. T. Love Awarded Posthumous Degree By Queen's College

A posthumous award of a master of arts degree will be made to W. T. (Bill) Love, 11108 64 street, Edmonton, at the convocation of Queen's University Friday. NELSON NAMED NEW CHAIRMAN OF ENGINEERS

Edmonton Branch Of Canadian Institute Holds Annual Meeting

E. Nelson, chief engineer of Northwestern Utilities Limited, was chairman of the Edmonton Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada at the annual meeting held Monday evening at the Macdonald hotel. He succeeds Charles E. Garnett, M.E.I.C.

Prof. R. M. Hardy of the department of civil engineering at the University of Alberta was elected vice-chairman and B. W. Pitfield, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the executive are A. Allen, H. R. Webb, U. F. McDougall, C. W. Carry, T. D. Stanley, P. M. Sauder, Mr. Garnett and W. R. Mount.

GUEST SPEAKER

Guest speaker was W. G. Worcester, M.E.I.C., professor of ceramic engineering at the University of Saskatchewan, who spoke on "Ceramics and the Ceramic Engineer."

Prof. Worcester joined the University of Saskatchewan faculty in 1921 when he established the first chair of ceramic engineering in the British Empire.

He was responsible for development of the fire brick industry in Saskatchewan, before which all fire brick in western Canada was imported from the United States.

CERAMIC PLANTS

Ceramic engineers design plants for the manufacture of tile, glass, pottery, china, cement and enamel, Prof. Worcester told the meeting.

He stated that the prospects for the ceramic industry in western Canada were not large, due to the distance from markets. A modern ceramic plant, designed to produce profitably, could manufacture western Canada's requirements in enamel and porcelain in a week, he said.

RELIEF GRANTS ARE AWAITING OTTAWA ACTION

Pending passage by Dominion government at the parliamentary session opening Thursday, the provincial relief grant advances to municipalities are being delayed, it was learned Monday.

Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health and in charge of relief, some time ago communicated with the Dominion government stating that the province was willing to advance money to municipalities on receipt of assurance from the Dominion that provision for reimbursement on a dollar for dollar basis would be made in the new relief agreement now being negotiated.

Reimbursement to the extent of one-half of its advances for gross municipal expenditures, where this was 50 or 60 per cent of the total amount, was asked by the province.

Hon. Norman McLarty, minister of labor in the Dominion government, replying to Dr. Cross' letter, recalled that in a previous communication he stated the Dominion would be agreeable to becoming a party to the 40-40-20 basis of relief, for food, fuel, clothing and shelter. He added a proviso, however, that on account of heavy war expenditures, outlays be reduced to a minimum and as a result of this a maximum contribution might be fixed by the Dominion.

Consideration is being given to the amount to be provided by parliament for the province, it was stated.

Mr. McLarty further stated that he will advise the province at the earliest opportunity of any maximum amount that might be fixed by the Dominion.

City Will Probe Trade Council's Housing Protest

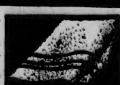

Letter from A. Farmilo, general secretary of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council, to the mayor, commissioners and aldermen, suggesting that the city should promote a housing scheme under the Dominion Housing Act in order to prevent the creation of slum conditions by discouraging the present trend of turning one-family dwellings into multiple-family apartments, was read at the Monday night meeting of council. Councilmen decided to leave the question with the commissioners for further investigation and action.
